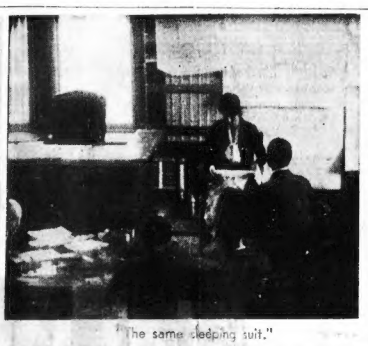
EXCLUSIVE PICTURES OF LINDBERGHS ON STAND

"We had the $50,000 ready."

"We took it to the cemetery."



The same sleeping suit.

"My first-born son wore."

Three exclusive movie clips of Charles A. Lindbergh, on the witness stand, during the early days of the trial. The father of the kidnaped and murdered child told of the night of the kidnaping, and of the hunt after the alarm of kidnaping had been given. The girl in the photograph is a court stenographer. "These clothes belonged to our boy," Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh was speaking. These movie snaps are printed for the first time. Attorney General Wilentz is asking questions. Yesterday the Boston Evening American printed the first movie scenes from the courtroom, showing Hauptmann on stand.

MILLION SNOW BILL PROBED BY FIN COM

Boston's $1,000,000 bill for snow removal already is under fire of the Finance Commission, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The commission is delving into contracts made last December.

It is interested in Mayor Mansfield's request for a loan order of $800,000 for purchase of removal equipment.

The commission hints that provisions of many of the contracts were not properly carried out.

Since the contracts were made in December, two of the commission's membership of five have been removed after hearings before the Governor's Council. Another was removed as chairman.

Before the contracts were given, the city advertised for them and wrote into the specifications that removal of the snow must be by hand labor as a move to relieve unemployment.

Quick Protest

In effect, the specifications reduced the use of loaders to a minimum.

Complaints that machine loaders were used in the place of men reached the commission almost immediately after the recent storm that tied up traffic for days.

The request of Mayor Mansfield that follow-d interested the commission, even as the mayor sought the $800,000 from the city council for snow loaders.

The commission sits in official meeting next Thursday. There is a chance, however, that a snow removal report may be issued before that time.

The mayor's order is now before the finance committee of the city council. It's immediate passage was blocked by City Councillor Henry L. Shattuck, who sought more information on the specifications.

The council committee held a meeting yesterday but decided to postpone action until the city purchasing agent could have a complete report on the machinery required.

Today's revelation came as approximately $80,000 was paid to the city's emergency snow shovelers at 30 city yards.

Wages being paid today are only for work done prior to last Monday.

At City Hall it was admitted the men had been hired in such a hurry that no work cards or other identification marks could be issued to them.

Therefore it was necessary for the gang foremen to identify them at the yards and inform the paymasters how many hours they had worked.

SLED HITS AUTO
2 Boys Injured

Coasting down the steep incline in Sullivan street, Charlestown, two boys suffered severe injuries today when their sled struck the rear wheel of an automobile at Russell street.

The boys are Lawrence Fox, 9, of 17 Prospect street, and Frederick McDonald, 10, of 17 Russell street. The McDonald boy suffered a fractured left arm, cuts and bruises on the right hip and thigh. The Fox boy's face was torn and he suffered abrasions on the right foot.

ASH, GARBAGE ### Collection On

Boston's first ash and garbage collection since the storm starts tomorrow, under the direction of Peter F. Garrity, superintendent of the sanitary division, and with the assistance of 1,000 men and 100 city contract trucks. The men will be culled from the ranks of city, ERA, welfare and hired workers.

Snow-loaders began work today in the alleys behind Beacon, Marlboro and other Back Bay streets to clear the way for trucks.

2300 RIOT
Over Snow Pay

Twenty-three hundred Waltham snow-shovelers employed by the city rioted as they were being paid off today at city stables on Pond street. Approximately $19,500 is to be divided among them for their services during the big snowstorm.

The riot followed workers complaints they were not receiving sufficient pay. Police were called to restore order.

Wheaton Girl 19 Days Hiccoughing

Chicago, Feb. 2—Miss Elizabeth Warner, 19-year-old Wheaton College student, entered her 19th day of hiccoughing today, with her relatives fearing she might die of starvation.

She has been unable to retain food and has slept only fitfully since she became ill. Her physician, Dr. A. L. Mathis, said he was considering the advisability of resorting to intravenous feeding.

Miss Warner, who has been hiccoughing 20 times a minute, has failed to respond to various treatments, and was described as being very close to complete exhaustion.

Members of her family said that she underwent an emergency operation for relief from appendicitis last November, and had become overwrought in an effort to catch up with back work. She was studying for a doctor's degree in chemistry in Wheaton College, Norton, Mass.

ANTI-TOXIN PLOT CHARGED; 2 HELD

By Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 2—Arrest of two men on charges of conspiracy in distributing "deteriorated and ineffective" anti-toxin for charity use sent the state on a weird search through its records of diphtheria deaths today.

Roy U. Miller, veteran chief of the biological products division of Pennsylvania's Department of Health, furnished bail last night and Dr. E. K. Tingley, veterinarian and president of the Gilliland Laboratories of Marietta, Pa., which sells its products to seven states, was arrested today.

Atty.-Gen. Charles J. Margiotti says both men have admitted that dates were changed on two-year-old anti-toxin last fall.

Tingley today denied any "collusion to defraud the state" after conferring with his attorney, John E. Malone of Lancaster.

"Every operation," Tingley said, "is above board. Records of our laboratory are available to the department of health now or at any other time.

"This came as a surprise. All diphtheria anti-toxin distributed from our laboratories contains more anti-toxin than is shown on the label.

"When the potency date expired they were sent back to the laboratories. The packages were not redated without being rechecked."

Margiotti said discovery that dates on several hundred boxes of serum were altered to extend the date of potency 16 months beyond the usual two-year period led to the recall of the Marietta firm's products from more than 700 drug stores.

He added that the Bureau of Vital Statistics is listing all diphtheria deaths since last October 17 for a survey.

In addition to the altered boxes, Margiotti said information given him indicated that 1100 boxes of anti-toxin were returned to the laboratories where the doses were "rewrapped" and returned.

WHY SHARPE GIRL TOOK HER LIFE

ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS insists the story of Peter Sommer, who said he saw Fisch and Violet Sharpe with a baby the night of the kidnaping, is an "Alice in Wonderland" story. Page 3.

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—Bruno Richard Hauptmann is placing a great deal of reliance in a German woman handwriting expert who is to be called to the stand by the defense next week.

She is Frau Hilda Barunlich-Zaenglein, formerly of Wuerzburg, Germany, and now a portrait painter in New York city.

Frau Barunlich-Zaenglein said through an interpreter today that the pen pressure and the shading in the lines of Hauptmann's writing taken after his arrest in New York are entirely different from the penmanship of the Lindbergh ransom notes.

New York, Feb. 2—Violet Sharpe visited a speakeasy the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, the New York Times reported today, explaining why the 28-year-old housemaid in the Englewood home of Mrs. Dwight Morrow committed suicide.

Without naming its informant, the newspaper says Miss Sharpe, contrary to orders of the household, visited the banned speakeasy in the Oranges.

During the search for the kidnaper of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., Miss Sharpe was thoroughly investigated, so much so that after her death the British acting consul general in New York was instructed by his government to investigate the suicide.

According to the story told here Miss Sharpe and other servants in the Morrow home had been forbidden to go to the speakeasy resort.

On the night of the kidnaping she met a young man outside the Morrow home and visited the banned speakeasy.

When Mrs. Morrow asked her the next day where she had been, Miss Sharpe refused to tell, fearing she would lose her position.

Mrs. Morrow immediately notified the police and the maid was questioned by the New Jer-

WITNESS SAYS HE SAW BABY

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2.

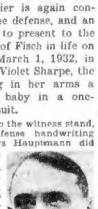
ONCE more the uneasy ghost of Isidor Fisch floats into the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann today, this time vaguely accompanied by the ghost of Violet Sharpe, the maid in the Morrow home who committed suicide after being questioned about the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

From its grave in faraway Germany, the shade of the consumptive furrier is again conjured up by the defense, and an attempt made to present to the jury a picture of Fisch in life on the night of March 1, 1932, in company with Violet Sharpe, the latter carrying in her arms a golden haired baby in a one-piece sleeping suit.

There comes to the witness stand, following a defense handwriting expert who says Hauptmann did not write the ransom notes, a swarthy man named Peter H. Sommer, who says he is a fingerprint expert, and who relates a strange tale that is of a piece with the many other strange tales that are creeping into Bruno Richard Hauptmann's fight to escape the electric chair.



Damon Runyon

Around mid-night on the night of March 1, 1932, so says swarthy Sommer, which would make it after the kidnaping, he saw on a Weehawken to New York ferry boat two men, the inevitable tall and short man, who met a woman with a blanketed baby in her arms outside the ferry house on the New York side, who helped her onto a crosstown car and then disappeared.

"It Looks Like Them," He Says

The florid, immaculate Edward J Reilly, who seems as irritable as a fretful porcupine, hands Sommer a photo of the dead Isidor Fisch, and asks him if he recognizes the man in the picture as one of the men he saw on the boat.

Sommer peers at the picture through large lensed specks with owlish gravity, and says:

"It looks like him."

Later Reilly hands him a photo of the dead Violet Sharpe, in life a rather nice looking girl in her mid-twenties, and asks the witness if that is the woman he saw with the baby in her arms.

Again Sommer peers at the picture, and says:

"It could be."

He describes the woman he saw as of "medium build," about five feet six or seven inches tall, and wearing a brown coat trimmed with fur. He says she had dark hair.

He got on the same crosstown car she boarded with the baby, and the baby's blanket fell off, and he saw it was a golden haired baby.

The two men who helped the woman on the car went away, and he did not see them again.

He does not recall the woman getting out of the car, the incident making no great impression on him until he heard the next day of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh child.

Then, he says, he personally went to the New York police and wrote to the Jersey police, but they did not seem to regard his story seriously.

Wilentz Blasts Questions

As Attorney-General David T. Wilentz later suggests, the police were loaded up with tales of mysterious women carrying golden haired babies around about that time.

Sommers gets very cagy when the Attorney-General starts blazing questions at him with the acidity that is characteristic of Wilentz in examining these defense witnesses.

Reilly's first handwriting expert, the quaint old John M. Trendley of St. Louis, challenged by the State but admitted by Judge Trenchard, says he examined Fisch's handwriting in connection with the notes, but did not have enough specimens of the furrier's penmanship to give an opinion as to whether he wrote the notes.

His brings no charts of his won, after the manner of the average expert, which is perhaps explained by Reilly's statement of the finances of the defense yesterday, "we stand here penniless."

So Reilly and Trendley use the charts brought in by Albert S. Osborn, an old, old rival of Trendley's and Trendley rather gives us to understand that Osborn put down on his charts just the things from the ransom notes and Hauptmann's admitted writings, that would make the notes appear to have been written by the one hand, leaving out the things that show a difference.

Speaking of these alleged omissions by his old adversary in the handwriting jousts of the bygone ages, Trendley says: "I am surprised."

Trendley says he thinks the note left in the Lindbergh nursery was written by a left handed man who was trying to disguise his writing.

Later, under cross-examination, he enlevarate to give the somewhat bewildered looking jury an occular demonstration of what he means.

He says he is sure Hauptmann did not write the notes, on his comparisons of the notes with Hauptmann's admitted writing, and the old expert says it is this belief that brought him into the case as a witness.

Trendley declines to accept the spelling of such words as "light" with the g and h transposed to make it "liht," which appears in both the ransom notes and Hauptmann's accepted or "request" writings as significant, because he says Hauptmann may have been writing what was dictated to him by the police, and simply making the transpositions from force of habit.

He says:

"I wouldn't take anything written in a police station."

Peter H. Sommer comes on after everybody is pretty well tuckered out from the expert testimony, though Lanigan and Trendley leave us laughing as they say goodbye when Lanigan quotes two different answers, one yes and one no, that the old expert has made to Reilly on direct examination, and asks:

He'll Stand on "Either One"

"Which answer do you wish to stand on?"

Trendley gazes at Lanigan through his spectacles in kindly fashion, and says: "Oh, either one."

Peter's story, as brought out by Reilly on direct, causes the weary souls in the courtroom to sit up and take renewed interest, especially when it becomes known that Reilly has shown him a picture of Violet Sharpe, and he says it looks like the woman he saw carrying the baby.

It is not the first time that the name of Violet Sharpe has been brought into the trial, but it is the first time that Violet Sharpe, or anyone else, has been reported carrying a baby the night of the kidnaping. The spectators stare at the swarthy Sommer sitting nonchalantly in the witness chair.

Mrs. Bruno Hauptmann, wife of the defendant in the Lindbergh murder trial, and Chief Defense Counsel Edward Reilly seemed pleased with the way the defense case was progressing at the last session of the hearing. Their spirits were not dampened a bit when J. M. Trendley, veteran handwriting expert, said Hauptmann could not have written the ransom notes and then went to charts and pointed out to the jury his reasons for saying so. He surprised the jury by writing with both his right and left hands to stress points he made.

BRUNO Sure He'll GO FREE

"WILL TEACH GERMAN"

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—Affable Egbert Rosecrans, Bruno Hauptmann's resident counsel, is slated for a thoroughgoing German lesson after the trial.

"When this mess is all over," Bruno told Rosecrans today, "I am going to stay at your home in the country for a while, forget this terrible thing, and see that you improve your German."

There is no "if" in the mind of the defendant over the jury's ultimate verdict.

"I have no doubt," Hauptmann told Rosecrans, "that I shall go free. I think my lawyers are proving not only that I could not have committed the horrible crime with which I am charged, but also that some one else did it."

The prisoner was pale and drawn today, more so than ever before.

Told the Truth

"My witnesses told the truth," Hauptmann told Rosecrans. "Some of them I did not remember until after they had told their stories.

Hauptmann felt, he told Rosecrans, that the testimony of his alibi witnesses could not be broken down. He particularly liked that of his wife, Anna Hauptmann.

"Annie's story was honest, and Mr. Wilentz couldn't do anything about it," Hauptmann said, "She knew just what had happened. She has always been telling me to tell the truth, and she told nothing but the truth."

Hauptmann added:

"I feel good, but I would like more exercise."

He said also he would like to see his 14-month-old son, Mannfried, more often.

"But I would prefer that he is not in court," he said. "I want him to carry in that young mind of his no unpleasant memories. The courtroom is no place for him."

"Just you wait a minute. You run down and ring in the alarm, and I'll rescue myself."

Salvucci ran to the nearest fire signal box, and then sped back to help the aged woman.

He found her tucking her "valuables" into a neat package. When he finally prevailed upon her to follow him out of the smoke-filled house, she took the bundle with her.

The fire caused damage estimated at $1000.

sey state police, and also by Deputy Chief Harry Walsh of Jersey City.

The questioning went on at intervals, and Miss Sharpe continued to refuse to divulge where she had been.

When Deputy Chief Walsh called at the Morrow home on June 12, that year, and when the maid was told that he was waiting downstairs to question her some more, she took the poison.

After the account of her death was published a young men went to the State police in Alpine, N. J. told them he had been out with Miss Sharpe on the night of the kidnaping and named the place.

His story was checked carefully and was found to be accurate in all of its important details.

Therefore, the police investigation of Miss Sharpe was dropped, and the police were convinced that she had no connection with the crime.

A. Harry Moore, then Governor of New Jersey, subsequently denied that Miss Sharpe had been submitted to a police "third degree."

The British Acting Consul General in New York also reported to his government that the New Jersey police were blameless in connection with the nursemaid's suicide.

State Will Clear Violet Sharpe's Name

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—The State of New Jersey will clear the name of Violet Sharpe, injected into the Lindbergh kidnap case by the defense, Assistant Attorney-General Robert Peacock said today.

Miss Sharpe, a maid in the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, committed suicide when she was to be questioned for the fourth time by officers investigating the kidnaping.

Peter H. Sommer, a "surprise" Hauptmann defense witness, yesterday testified he saw a woman who resembled the maid carrying a blonde baby entering a 42nd street crosstown trolley car near the Hudson river ferry the night of the kidnaping.

Servants from the Morrow household and Ernest Miller, the young man Miss Sharpe was with on the night will be called during the state's rebuttal "to account for every hour" of that night, Peacock said.

She went to a roadhouse, which had been forbidden to the servants by Mrs. Morrow, and was fearful of losing her job, Peacock said. The young woman was home by 11 o'clock, the prosecutor added.

Peacock said Colonel Lindbergh had not been consulted as to whether such rebuttal evidence should be submitted, the flyer having given the state permission before the trial started to use any and all evidence and information he might have if needed to convict Hauptmann.

Juror Case Better Than He Has Been for a Week

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—Representatives of the state drew a deep breath of relief today when Dr. Barclay Fuhrman, examined gray-haired Liscom C. Case, "Number 11" of the jury trying Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the murder of Baby Lindbergh, and pronounced him "feeling better than he has been in a week."

The elderly Case, who suffers from a heart affliction, has been ill for more than a week. He had to be supported on the short trips to and from the courthouse yesterday and there were rumors he was near a collapse.

Since collapse of the juror at this time would result in a mistrial of the state's "$150,000 case," as Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly calls it, the physician's bulletin was the biggest news of the day around here.

Case was permitted to take a little careful exercise on the long, latticed balcony of the ancient, redbrick Union Hotel where the jury is housed.

Reporters watched him from the street below and eagerly awaited the report of Dr. Fuhrman, who also watched him as he clumped up and down the balcony.

Meantime, Reilly announced he would have four more witnesses to link the late Isidor Fisch and Violet Sharpe to the kidnap case. Peter H. Sommer, New York fingerprint expert, already has testified that he saw a man and a woman resembling Fisch and Miss Sharpe, with a baby shortly after the kidnaping.

The new witnesses will be three Montreal residents who are expected to testify they saw Fisch in that town with the Lindbergh baby and Mrs. Anna Bonesteel, a Yonkers, N. Y. lunchroom proprietor, who has declared she saw Miss Sharpe at a Yonkers ferry the night of the kidnaping, with two men.

QUINCY CLERICS Oppose Dog Track

Dog racing in Quincy would bring an undesirable element into the city and it is not beificial to sports, members of the Quincy Ministers' Association said today when they went on record as bein opposed to the establishment of a dog race track at the present Deniecn airport.

The ministers announced they would oppose any attempt to establish a track in Quincy.

MAY END FEES Of Brookline Clerks

A proposal to eliminate the fees of the offices of town clerk and tax collector and to increase the salaries is being considered today by the board of selectmen of Brookline.

Fred B. Richardson, town clerk, told the board he accepted $800 in fees last year. His salary is $4100.

Albert P. Briggs, tax collector, told the board that his net fees for the year of 1934 amounted to $6800. His salary is $4300.

Drafts Crime Law

Attorney General Paul A. Dever today said that drafts of legislation for the creation of a crime laboratory in his department will be ready within a short time.

State's 'Brain Trust' Digs Up Cross-Fire Data

By the Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—The eyes of the prosecution's brain trust—eight or ten highly trained investigators—are providing Attorney General David T. Wilentz with the last-minute ammunition with which he hopes to convict Bruno Hauptmann of the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Rarely in the courtroom when Justice Trenchard is on the bench, these men pore over the transcript only a few short steps from the witness chair, whose occupant's voice they never hear.

Their story of the trial comes on the flurry of the printed trial transcript.

Their group numbers state troopers, New York police officers, federal agents and assistants from the attorney-general's office.

As they read their hurriedly delivered copies they make copious notes—notes from which the prosecutors frame entangling questions to confront the defense's witnesses in cross-examination.

They are the nameless men who have been "on" the Lindbergh case since March 1, 1932. Their reactions to dates, times and the sequence of the case are automatic.

They check each witness' story mentally with their own recollection of events since the kidnap night, and when their memory differs from the story told, they start police machinery to checking.

It's a job to them—a job they had rather do than sit in the courtroom listening to the often monotonous testimony from the witness chair.

"We know more what happens than our buddies who are actually there," they said.

"More often than not they can't hear while we can always read."

The rare glimpses they have of the actual drama comes when they hurry in to the prosecution table with one of their scribbled notes that may lead to a question reducing a witness to stammering bewilderment.

FERRY BOAT TALE IS LIKENED TO "ALICE IN WONDERLAND"

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS
Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2—We sort of got into Alice in Wonderland yesterday in the Flemington courthouse and a great relief it was, just for a little while, after the weeks of torture and tragedy and excitement.

You probably remember about Alice, and the trial of the Knave of Hearts, and the king who said, "Let's begin at the beginning and go on from there" and the queen who shouted "off with their heads" and the cat who grinned and everything disappeared but the grin.

It was like that in the Hauptmann trial on the final day of the fourth week.

A gentleman by the name of Peter A. Sommer was on the witness stand most of the afternoon.

I shall always love Peter A. Sommer, because I had sort of given up believing in ferry boats until he came along, and it was awfully nice to get back to the good old days of fantasy again. Mr. Sommer was, if he will forgive me for saying so, straight out of Gilbert and Sullivan, and Mr. Trendly, our handwriting expert of the morning was out of Dickens.

Adela St. Johns

Mr. Sommer mounted the witness stand at the end of a long hard week which had seen days of Hauptmann on the witness stand fighting for his very existence, which had seen Anna Hauptmann sitting there fighting for the man she loves, which had seen the rather harrowing debacle of young Elbert Carlstrom, first of the alibi witnesses.

Nerves on Edge Over Bruno

The days when Hauptmann was on the stand were the tensest, the most dramatic and the most vital the trial will ever know and they left us haggard and worn with the strain of them.

They were the high spot in the greatest trial the world has ever known. Our nerves were strung like violin strings, our eyes ached with watching, our ears with listening, our minds with trying to penetrate his testimony, upon which in the end, the outcome of this case will hang.

I am not a lawyer, but had I been one I would have let Mr. Hauptmann descend from the witness stand and then I would have said, "the defense rests."

Mr. Reilly, who is a lawyer, with a reputation for shrewdness, decided otherwise. And so we came to dear Peter A. Sommer.

Now Mr. Sommer mounted to that stand with a number of set and settled ideas, and he ran his hand inside his collar and settled his glasses and prepared to prove said ideas right up to the teeth.

First he didn't intend to let Attorney General Wilentz get the better of him! No, siree, Bob! He'd heard about the brilliant Mr. Wilentz and the he had the habit of tripping witnesses, of confusing them, of actually insisting that they answer questions.

Well, now, here's how it was with Mr. Sommer.

Upon a night in March, along about the 1st, so he says, he was coming back from Princeton, N. J., where he had been giving a lesson in the science of finger printing.

He "Runs Into" Kidnap Trip

Mr. Sommer returned to New York city, where he abode, on a trolley car to the ferry, which crossed the river, which connected up with another trolley down on 42d street in New York city. When whom should he see aboard the trolley but Isidor Fisch and Violet Sharpe and the Lindbergh baby, all cozy and cuddled up under a pink blanket with just his curls showing.

This was around 1 in the morning of the night on which the baby was kidnaped.

Already, for over an hour, a mad desperate alarm had been spread for the missing Lindbergh heir, already every policeman and detective within miles of the Hopewell house was frantically searching for a little baby with blonde curls. Already every eye was on watch.

But, of course, the kidnapers wouldn't worry about that. They were waiting for the cat's grin to disappear under the caterpillar's toadstool, so they drew in that blonde curley-haired baby at 1 o'clock in the morning aboard a 42d street cross town car in New York where tht alarm was hottest wouldn't excite any comment whatsoever.

So they just sort of met up at the ferry house under the third rose bush, if you remember your Alice. Just how they got together wasn't very clear in Mr. Sommer's story, but then, what was?

Only there were two trolleys and two little short men who looked like Isidor Fisch or maybe only one of them did, but whether he was the little man five feet four on the trolley before the ferry or after. I couldn't quite make out and neither could Mr. Sommer, so let's begin all over again at the beginning and go on from there.

Anyway, there were two men, a little man and a big man, and they were on the trolley and the ferry, but they didn't have any baby with them so maybe they had only been holding the ladder, but when they got to 42d street where it was nice and crowded, they met the lady with the baby, who was just exactly like the pictures of Violet Sharpe, or maybe it was the red queen.

They helped her onto the car with the baby and Mr. Sommer got on too, and then the two men vanished and left the duchess and the baby.

Anyhow, the woman and the baby were then quite alone in the great city, with no one to protect them, which must have been a little nerve racking for Violet Sharpe, or the lady Mr. Sommer identified as looking exactly like the picture of Violet Sharpe, because anything more thrilling than being on a 42d street cross town car in New York city three hours after that alarm went out for the Lindbergh baby, with the baby right in your lap and every radio and newspaper and policeman broadcasting it, and all the lights of 42d street shining on you, I can't imagine.

I mean you would have thought that Isidor Fisch, who was one of the little men on one end of the ferry boat trip, but which one I could not tell you, would have arranged for a little less light.

31-YEAR BAN BROKEN TO ALLOW BURIAL

To allow the funeral of a 70-year-old Cambridge woman, a 31-year-old court order was dissolved in Suffolk court today.

The old order came to light when arrangements were started for the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Kelleher of 112 Huron avenue. It provided that none could be buried in her late husband's lot at Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden.

Officials of the cemetery became willing defendants in a bill in equity brought by Mrs. Margaret L. Lynch, a niece of Mrs. Kelleher.

By agreement of all concerned, Judge Marcus Morton issued an order to restrain the cemetery officials from preventing the burial.

Daniel Kelleher had the order issued in Cambridge court in 1904. He died in 1926, but never revoked the order. The reasons for the order were not made known, but the family informed the court it was meant to include Mrs. Kelleher.

Cemetery officials, willing to cooperate, asked a court order to offset the stop order.

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 2 — Sprightly tunes of ten years ago, played on a resurrected phonograph, furnish the rhythms to which the Hauptmann trial jurors cut gay dance steps after their days in court.

Mrs. Ethel Stockton, comely matron and most youthful of the jury's four lady members, is the belle of the ball and is much sought after as a dancing partner by the gentlemen of the jury.

Mrs. Verna Snyder, heaviest of them all, is not averse to stepping and swings about with the rest.

Juror No. 11, Liscom C. Case, whose chronic heart ailment causes more concern to others than to himself, is up until 10 o'clock and even then vows he isn't sleepy.

Dances are held in one of the bedrooms of the jury's quarters on the third floor of their hotel. Beds are taken out and the carpet rolled up. Music is furnished by an old phonograph of the hotel proprietor's wife, who brought it down from the attic and dusted it off.

HEAT, HUGE SEAS Hit Pacific Coast

Los Angeles, Feb. 2 (AP)—The phenomenon of towering waves battering southern California beaches where thousands sought relief from mid-summer temperatures, puzzled scientists here today.

When temperatures shot up to 82 degrees yesterday, many changed from woolens to bathing suits to cool off in the surf. But from Balboa to Malibu, including all of Los Angeles' favored beaches, huge seas roared in with such force bathers dared not venture beyond wading depth.

Groundhog Sees No Shadow Here

MR. GROUNDHOG

BUT AT GOBBLER'S KNOB, PA., SAYS WINTER LASTS

Old Bre'r Groundhog ain't see his shadow this morning around Boston, after all.

At least that is the opinion of the weatherman who weaned the murky horizon for evidences of sunshine.

The sun broke through the clouds far out to sea out in Boston the sky was overcast until noon. And that's cheerful news for those who take stock in the old legend which declares that—

"If Candlemas Day be dry and fair
The half of winter's to come—and more;
If Candlemas Day be wet and foul
The half of winter's gone at Yule."

Which means that winter is about over. However, those who scoff at such old legends can take comfort in the Punxsutawney groundhog that came out from Gobbler's Knob in Pennsylvania this morning and cast a very visible shadow at 9:11 o'clock.

Members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club greeted the seer of Gobbler's Knob and watched the ceremony with baited breath.

Down in Quarryville, Pa., the Slumbering Groundhog Lodge, No. 1, which was originally founded by the Indians, paid solemn tribute to their weather-god, too.

Up at the crack of dawn, the lodge held solemn ritualistic services until the real sun-up.

William Uhler Hensel, secretary and unbonded treasurer of the lodge, was high priest and chief factotum this year.

The quarryville groundhog saw his shadow at 11:13 o'clock.

So you can take your choice.

Sommer Hall-Mills Case Witness

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 2—Peter H. Sommer, alibi witness for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was also a witness in New Jersey's other famous murder trial . . . The Hall-Mills case . . . It was disclosed here today.

On that earlier occasion, however, Sommer was a witness not for the defense, but for the state.

The prosecution in the Hall-Mills case summoned Sommer to testify concerning his activities while in the employ of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall's private investigator, Felix Di Martini, four years before the trial opened in 1926.

Sommer testified then that he had been engaged to visit cigar stores and public gathering places in New Brunswick, N. J., and try to overhear the conversations of the townspeople in regard to the case.

At Flemington yesterday Sommer told of seeing the late Isidore Fisch and Violet Sharpe and the Lindbergh baby on a North river ferryboat on the night of the kidnaping of the infant son of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Detective Edward Mullaney of Brooklyn, declared last night that Sommer was a sort of "police buff," who hung around police precinct stations both for his own pleasure and because the police frequently gave him small jobs.

BOY, 11, SAVES Family From Death

The early rising habit of John Daley, 11, 482 Main street, Charlestown, probably saved his mother's and sister's lives from gas poisoning today.

As the boy rose from bed, he collapsed to the floor, awakening his father, John G. Daley, sleeping below. Daley hurried upstairs, carried his son out into the living-room. After opening the windows, he found his wife, Lola, and his daughter of the same name in another bedroom, both overcome.

Colombo, Ceylon, Feb. 2 (AP)—At least half a million persons, it was estimated today, are affected by the malaria epidemic which broke out in November and ravaged a fifth of Ceylon's area.

The disease struck with greatest intensity on the west coast.

Epidemic conditions have ceased in several districts and new infections are steadily declining, although relapses caused a large increase in hospital admissions.

CAPITAL READY TO ACT QUICKLY ON GOLD

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 2—The Roosevelt Administration was reported today to have completed all preparations for any swift monetary action it may consider necessary after the Supreme Court rules on the gold cases.

This word was passed in authoritative quarters as observers watched for another Saturday conference of the nine justices on whom President Roosevelt's money policies hinge.

Many believed the high court would deliver on Monday its decision in the cases attacking the government's abrogation of the gold clause. The capital was set for a nerve-strained week-end.

There was a possibility the ruling might not come for another week or so. But administration officials, while expressing every confidence that the government would be upheld, were taking no chances of being caught unawares.

Involved in the cases were some $100,000,000,000 of government and private contracts. Should the court determine that they should be paid in terms of the pre-devaluation gold content of the dollar, it would add $69,000,000,000 to these debts.

Swift congressional action rivaling that of the bank holiday was forecast. To prevent an upset in the market, it was expected that all stock exchanges would close when the opinion is read.

PLAN to Clip PENSION

WOULD REMOVE UNEARNED PAY

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 2—While critics of President Roosevelt's social security program sought higher benefits, administration officials were reported today to be drawing a plan to cut proposed federal expenditures by several hundred million dollars a year.

The recommendations were not in final shape, but one informed Capitol source understood they would call, among other things, for elimination of federal donations for "unearned annuities."

Under the administration plan, now before Congress, a man of 65 could begin providing against his old age by paying into the old age pension fund.

At 65 he would start getting the money back, plus payments from the federal government equal to the additional sum he would have contributed had he started paying when he was 21 years old.

These payments from the government are called "unearned annuities." Actuarial calculations showed, officials said, that they would cost huge sums.

Insurance Bar

Another reason for the proposed change, members of Congress said, is an objection raised by some legislators who argue the annuities would be unfair competition with insurance companies.

Another change considered in administration circles, it was said, is a transfer of the unemployment insurance fund from a social insurance board to the Treasury.

Witnesses had told congressional committees that if the board administered the money, it might seem like charity.

Word also reached Capitol Hill that administration officials might urge the exemption of farmers, domestics and casual workers from the pensions and job insurance provisions on the ground that to administer the plan for them would be too difficult.

MOHAWK RESCUE STORY BARED

By Universal Service

New York, Feb. 2—An old skipper gave federal investigators the last log of the Mohawk—the wireless requiem the Ward liner sputtered as she sank off Jersey's coast with a loss of 45 lives.

Captain J. W. McKenzie, master of the Algonquin—ace of the rescue fleet—told a story of heroism and horror that held inspectors of the United States steamboat service spellbound for two hours.

His testimony indicated the Mohawk expected the freighter, Taliaman, which ripped the liner's side in a collision, to help rescue the passengers. But the Taliaman saved no one.

McKenzie said he thought many of the Mohawk's victims froze to death in an open life boat which was launched and lost.

Tropic Bride Sees Ice at Last

Very amazed was 19-year-old Mrs. Teodoy D. Polevoy, standing in the stern of the oil tanker Persephone, out of Tampico, as the vessel pounded and crunched its way through the harbor ice.

Occasionally she broke off one of the icicles that had formed on the ship's rail.

It was the first time in her life that she had seen one.

Mrs. Polevoy was born Senorita Marguerita Forney in Canarevo, Venezuela. Last September she met her husband, a Standard Oil Company accountant, in Caripito, Venezuela.

Today she was on her way to the home that she plans to establish with him in New York. Today, also, she had her first doubt as to whether New York was really the magic city her husband has described.

"If it can be as cold there as it is in Boston—" she mused aloud.

SUIT NAMES FORMER FINANCE HEAD

Robert Porter, former treasurer of the Citizen's Finance Corp., is charged with wrongfully abstracting funds in a bill in equity on file today in Suffolk superior court.

The bill was brought by Leslie A. Pike and Hildreth A. Auer, receivers for the corporation.

A total of $200,000 was taken by Porter while he was treasurer, according to allegations in the bill. Nearly all of this money was returned, it was said.

The bill avers, however, that Porter's alleged takings came when cash resources were vital and the acts destroyed the business of the corporation.

CARNEY Saves 2 in FIRE

HOME IN BACK BAY BURNS

Joseph P. Carney, New England director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and former internal revenue collector, rescued two maids through a skylight today as fire swept his home at 80 Marlboro street, Back Bay.

The maids, Sadie McAskill, 28, and Catherine McNeil, 26, were trapped by dense smoke on the fifth floor, after they had saved the Carney family by arousing them with screams.

Carney assisted his wife and two daughters, Betty, 23, and Ruth, 20, to the adjoining house by way of the fire-escape.

He then went to the roof of that house, crossed to his own roof, and dragged the two maids out through the skylight.

Two alarms were sounded for the fire before the occupants were safely out.

Damage was estimated at $10,000. Expensive furniture will have to be refinished. Valuable rugs were also damaged.

The flames started from an overheated furnace and worked up through a closet and bathroom shaft through three floors. Damage was chiefly from smoke and water.

Smoke pouring through the windows awakened Miss Catherine Curran, maid at 78 Marlboro street, and she aroused her employers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles White, who escaped with their two children.

The family of Frederick Deane, social registerite, into whose home the Carneys fled, also were alarmed by the blaze, as were other society families.

She Screamed

Miss McAskill, the maid, said:

"I had been up shortly before 7 o'clock and noticed a little smoke but I thought it was from the heat pipe.

"I went back to bed and slept soundly until seven, when I awoke and found the room filled with smoke. I called Catherine and when we opened our room door the hall was just filled with black smoke.

"Katherine screamed and was heard by Mr. Carney's daughters on the fourth floor, one floor below us. They ran downstairs and aroused their father on the third floor.

"He got his wife and daughters out by the rear fire escape to the Deane's home next door, then came for us. We were frantic and badly frightened when he came to the skylight and got us up through. We crossed over the roof in our bare feet to safety."

New Half-Sister For Norma Millen

The baby clothes Norma Millen was making in Dedham jail have finally found a home.

She has a new half-sister.

A baby girl was born to Mrs. Muriel Brighton, wife of Rev. Norman Brighton, father of Norma, in the maternity ward of Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick, early today.

The birth was reported as cesarian. Dr. C. Wesley, a Boston obstetrician, performed the operation. Dr. James Vance, the Brighton family physician, assisted.

When Norma Millen received the news she was still serving an indefinite sentence in Dedham jail for complicity with the Needham bank holdup and murder gang.

Her husband, Murton Millen, is awaiting execution for the same crime.

Last December, Mrs. Brighton said that the advent of the child would give her and her husband a "new interest in life."

Both Mrs. Brighton and the baby were reported doing very well.

MILLENS PLANNING NEW JAIL BREAK

Another break for freedom is being planned by the Millen brothers in Dedham jail.

Sheriff Samuel H. Capen declared that he had been so "tipped off."

Oddly enough, on the first anniversary of murder and robbery at Dedham that is about to spell electrocution for the Millens and Abe Faber, the veteran sheriff told of the tip in an interview on the need of removing the three Roxbury youths to safer keeping.

The sheriff said:

"I have been tipped off that the next attempt they make will be from the inside. Well, there'll be no break for them if constant guarding will prevent it.

"Neither of them is smart, just cuts. I guess Mort does the planning and Irving makes the spectacle.

"Abe Faber has more brains than the Millens put together and he isn't mean like they are, either. I've got armed state troopers on guard over them now in addition to the special jail guards."

'Gun Girl' Seized After New Holdup

Springfield, Feb. 2—Hampden County's alleged "gun girl" is in the clutches of the police again, once more charged with armed robbery.

She is Helen Orzalek, 23, a fugitive from the Sherborn Reformatory from which she made her fifth escape last September.

Helen was arrested at gun point by Chicopee police today after a three-mile chase over ice and snow-covered highways that ended when her car plunged into a snow bank.

Police say that with an armed male companion she entered a store owned by Julia Caproni in Chicopee and held him up for $60.

Police say that the man forced Caproni into an ice chest and while he was locking his victim up The girl looted the cash register.

Fleeing from the scene the pair cut off a police car at an intersection and then the chase began. When the car hit the snowbank the man jumped out and escaped.

The girl told Chicopee police her name was Ethel Dubard. She said she lived in Mattapan and in Bridgeport, Conn. She refused to tell her companion's name.

In court today, arraigned on a charge of armed robbery she pleaded not guilty and was held in $7500 bail until Feb. 5.

KINGFISH Death Plot IS BARED

REVEALED BY EX-SHERIFF

By International News Service

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 2—George R. (Red) Davis, former deputy sheriff of East Baton Rouge Parish, testified today that he plotted with a fellow deputy to "get Huey Long" for $7000 each.

Davis, replying in an apparently reluctant manner to the persistent questioning of the Louisiana "Kingfish," who conducted the inquiry, charged that Fred Parker, one of the alleged ringleaders in an asserted plot to assassinate Senator Long, approached him on the subject.

Later, Davis said, the offer was raised to $10,000, asserting he and Parker were to share equally $20,000 that had "been put up to kill Long."

"Parker asked me if I wanted to make some easy money," Davis testified. "I said I was always ready to make easy money. He said we could make $7000 apiece in 'getting' Huey Long.

"'You're a good chauffeur and a good shot and have a V-eight,'" Davis quoted Parker as saying, and under constant prodding by Senator Long related details of their purported plan.

Previously Parker and Fred O'Rourke, a Standard Oil employe also accused by Long as being a leader in the plot had stood on their constitutional rights and refused to answer questions. They charged they were being victimized in a frame-up.

H. S. Simmons, an assistant treasurer of a pipe line company, said he was at East Baton Rouge courthouse January 27 when several hundred men carrying arms gathered to protest Long's plan to take over the local government.

Witness said he went there "to protect the courthouse after I heard there was somebody going to run out all the officials."

"How did you hear that?" Long asked.

"Over the grapeline system, you know," Simmons replied.

Long asked if the information came over the "grapeline system at the Standard Oil," but Simmons replied he "just heard it."

POLICE SEIZE BABY IN 'NEGLECT' PROBE

In order to obtain custody of an alleged neglected three weeks' old Cambridge baby, officials of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children today secured a warrant in East Cambridge court charging the baby with being a neglected child.

The baby, Joan Taylor, is the three weeks' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor of Boylston street, Cambridge.

Warrant was obtained by Robert True, agent for the society, after the baby had been taken to Cambridge City Hospital in a police ambulance on the order of a physician.

Police were summoned to 48 Boylston street, Cambridge, early this morning by Dr. Richard N. Shields, Newton, and requested to take the baby to the hospital.

According to police, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor went out last night, leaving the baby in the apartment.

According to police, the Taylors have another baby girl, now being boarded in Arlington.

The couple were married two years ago in Portland, Me.

Bruno examines board from his attic with Jafsie's name, phone number.

Bruno bends forward to hear more clearly the questions put to him.

Attorney Reiley points to the ladder exhibits

"Stop! Stop! You lie too," says Bruno, pointing finger at prosecutor

Bruno, defiant, calm, legs crossed, leans back in the witness chair.

DELIBERATE BRUNO—Pauses for deliberate reflection. Straining neck to answer questions. Making determined efforts to make his answers clear. These and many other characteristics in the habits of Bruno Hauptmann, on the witness stand, are shown in this exclusive lot of movie pictures taken from a movie

Hauptmann, the thinker, again!

Attorney General Wilentz tries to "break" Bruno.

Wilentz swings hard.

A thrilling moment for Hauptmann. Attorney General Wilentz, with hand outstretched toward Bruno, a witness for himself. This was as Wilentz shouted, "Did you not lie in the information you gave police in the Bronx?" Hauptmann admitted that day that some of the answers made to the Bronx were in error.

"It was Hauptmann, I'm positive."

"The same gutteral voice."

RELIEF LIKE SAND ON TRACKS

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Hank Fletcher sliced himself a big side of beef over the Democratic relief appropriation.

Being a Republican, Henry looked at alphabetical recovery and found no T-bone to chew on.

He says the appropriation is really Democratic campaign funds and will have terrific bearing on the result.

Feeding the multitude with manna from the treasury has always been good politics and Hank knows it. So does Jim Farley.

Many years ago Coal Oil Johnny handed out lots of money and got plenty of advertising. So did Death Valley Scott and Butch McDevitt.

Relief is like cinders on ice and sand on the tracks. To be distributed where it will do the most good.

New York, Feb. 2—Just as reporters were about to interview Samuel Falk, 43, a painter, about his 13-day spell of hiccoughing, the attack suddenly ended.

Crabtre Jail Term Halted Love Reunion

Reconciliation of Mrs. Ada Pauline Crabtre of Lynn and the husband who divorced her, does not mean re-marriage, it was learned today.

Mrs. Crabtre, who stole $30,000 from a Lynn bank, today began serving 18 months at Salem jail.

To Mrs. Rachel Craig, the matron, the jailed woman said:

"Let the public forget me. I'm reconciled to my fate."

At the jail last night, she refused to eat and cried herself to sleep.

Today she ate breakfast of cornflakes, bread and coffee with other women inmates, dressed like her in blue denim dress and grey apron. At noon she partook of beef stew.

Will Hem Sheets

Mrs. Crabtre will hem sheets and pillow cases for state hospitals and other institutions during her stay at the jail. Her cell is only two doors removed from that occupied by Mrs. Jessie Costello during the latter's trial for alleged murder, on which Mrs. Costello was acquitted.

Mrs. Crabtre's mother, Mrs. George Vickery of Lynn, was to visit her daughter late today.

Arranging bonds, Mother will not be permitted to see Mrs. Crabtre until next Saturday but the mother said she would appeal to Sheriff Raymond.

Mrs. Crabetre's former husband—whom she left for Bishop—was a spectator when she was sentenced. He went to her aid when she nearly collapsed.

Mrs. Craig said:

"Mrs. Crabtre this morning put up her chin and joined in the routine. She is very brave."

POLICE TO GUARD Bishop's Rites

A detail of 20 police officers, two sergeants and a squad of detectives were assigned today to the Cathedral church of St. Paul on Tremont street, where memorial services will be held tomorrow afternoon for the slain Archbishop Leon Tourian, prelate of Armenian Apostolic church in America.

The archbishop was slain in his own church in New York a year ago.

WIDOW, 65, Dies in Fire

Pepperell, Feb. 2—A 65-year-old woman died and another woman, an Everett school teacher, suffered serious burns in an early morning fire here today.

Mrs. Ellen Dennison, 65, a widow, died of smoke suffocation. Her niece, Miss Madeleine Sliney, of Everett, who was visiting her for the week-end, was burned on the hands.

Miss Sliney and Mrs. Margaret Sliney, sister of the dead woman, weree arried to safety by a neighbor, George Herrig.

SHEPARD FIANCE ADMITS 'WHITE LIES'

By Associated Press.

Topeka, Kas., Feb. 2—Grace Rasden testified at the wife murder trial of Maj. Charles A. Shepard here today that she told Shepard, her former fiance, "Little white lies" and that her affection for him cooled soon after his arrest in Denver.

On cross-examination the blonde stenographer said she quit writing the army medical officer a week or ten days after his incarceration.

"I quit writing when I received a letter from him telling me to deny everything and to burn the letter," she said, gripping the arms of the witness chair.

"Why would he do that if he was not guilty," she added, her voice rising.

GANG Of 8 Youths SEIZED

CHARGED WITH 15 BREAKS

Eight youths, most of them in their 'teens, were jailed today as the notorious North End "Sash-weight Gang."

Charged against them was a string of 15 breaks in the North End, downtown Boston and the South End.

Police claimed proof that the gang had stolen at least $15,000 in merchandise. Investigation, authorities say, may run the total to twice that amount.

Two of the alleged young gangsters were taken at gunpoint two nights ago. Patrolman Edwin Reilly, of Division 2, said he caught them "red-handed" looting a South Market street store.

He fired five shots at the pair as they surrendered.

Early today police raiders descended on the North End. Some of the youths seized were dragged from their beds. Others, police said, were at addresses known to officials. Six were rounded up, taken to Division 2 headquarters. They gave the following names: Joseph DeMarco, 17; Paul Palumbo, 20; Anthony Barbaressi, 17; Dan Fiuman, 25, all of Salem street; Louis DeBarri, 21, of Sheafe street, and John Pepi, 19, of Prince street, all North End.

In Death of Brett

Mrs. Arlene Dadmun Brett, above, divorced wife of Donald C. Brett, has persuaded Attorney General Paul A. Dever to order an inquest into the death of her former husband. She says he was murdered.

POLICE Must Stop DOPE

BURROWS SAYS JOB IS LOCAL

Dope — the fountainhead of crime—must be drained out of Massachusetts by the regular police, rather than by a dependence upon the forces of the federal government.

Charles A. Burrows, district supervisor for New England of the U. S. Bureau of Narcotics, so stated in an address over station WAAB.

His address was under the auspices of the Boston Sunday Advertiser as part of its war on crime.

Paying tribute to the assistance of the Hearst newspapers in the anti-narcotic movement, he said:

"For many years the keen interest taken by Mr. Hearst in this important social and economic problem, through his nationwide organization, has contributed immeasurably toward a more coordinated, systematic and efficient enforcement of narcotic laws.

"The problem of dope addiction has become a pressing universal concern and we must gird our loins for the struggle against the evil."

Dope Leak

The principal leak in the dyke against dope smuggling, he said, lies between federal investigation and police jurisdiction, the speaker asserted.

The solution is the adoption of the uniform narcotic law, which Supervisor Burrows said Governor Curley had pledged himself to put through in the present session of the Legislature.

Although the federal men had caught more than three and a half tons of narcotics at the borders during 1934, the large figures merely served to show how much was being shipped to this country, he said.

Records of Thefts

Police figures prove that every dope addict arrested has a long record of petty thievery and banditry lodged against his name.

It is not while he is under the influence of a narcotic that a person commits a crime, Supervisor Burrows said. It is when he cannot afford a new supply that he becomes desperate and a lawbreaker.

He asked the public to swing the weight of its opinion toward having the uniform narcotic law adopted by Massachusetts.

RELIEF Funds for SCHOOLS

500 MILLIONS REQUESTED

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, Feb. 2—The Roosevelt administration has been asked to allot 500 million dollars for the construction of new schoolhouses, largely in the rural sections of the country, it was learned today.

While President Roosevelt has persistently refused to reveal his specific plans for spending the 4880 million dollars, now contained in the public works-relief bill before Congress, he is understood to contemplate this program of schoolhouse construction.

A survey of the "shocking inadequacy of modern schools for the children of America has been placed before the President and other administration officials by the National Education Association.

Schools Unsafe

While this survey covered only a section of the country, it revealed these "astounding conditions":

1—There are 677,000 children who are housed in school buildings "which have been condemned as unsafe and unsanitary."

2—There are 618,000 children "who go to school in portable, rented or other temporary structures utterly unsuited to their safety and the requirements of proper education."

3—Nearly 400,000 children are compelled to attend school on part time because of the lack of schoolhouse facilities to give them a full education.

16,000 Needed

The rural school population of this country is estimated as 12,800,000 children. The National Education Association has reported privately to the President that modern school facilities are now denied to at least 4,500,000 of them.

The survey reveals that 16,000 "consolidated" schools could be profitably erected in rural America. School districts in towns of less than 1000 population would be consolidated in the interest of efficiency and economy under a system of organization approved by the national government. Some $100,000,000 would be allotted to the construction of these new schoolhouses. They would be required to be at least six or eight-room structures.

The program contemplates grant aid to the great metropolitan and industrial cities in which the need for modern schoolhouse construction is admitted to be "exceedingly serious." These municipalities would be required to go on their own, without liberal national government aid.

BRETT DEATH PROBE RE-OPENED

Attorney-General Paul A. Dever may order an inquest into the death of Donald C. Brett, late Roxbury merchant, he said today. His divorced wife, Mrs. Arlene Dadmun Brett urged the inquest.

Brett, young department store owner, was found shot to death in his Brookline apartment in July, 1933. Medical Examiner Benjamin Rudman pronounced death suicide.

Mrs. Brett, who was cut off with $100 in her former husband's will, insisted to Attorney-General Dever that Brett was murdered. She said:

"I saw terrible marks on his head. The face showed unmistakable signs that he had been beaten between the eyes.

"And the bullet entered the back of the head. That is significant to me, if not to the authorities."

CURLEY SPEAKS At Amateur Night

Governor James M. Curley has agreed to speak at Scott Furrie's amateur night, Boston Garden, tomorrow evening, on behalf of the Volunteers of America.

Those who attend the concerts are asked to contribute minimum of ten cents admission, although many give more.

The proceeds are turned over to a local charity.

The Penny Lunch and the Mary Curley Memorial Home, operated by the Volunteers, will be this week's beneficiaries. Mayor Mansfield also will attend.

Smeterlin In Farewell Concert

By ANN AMES

Jan Smeterlin, Polish pianist, heard a short time ago at a Statler Morning Musicale, gave a concert at Jordan Hall last evening, on the eve of his departure for another European tour.

Mr. Smeterlin's recital confirmed earlier impressions of his virtuosity and artistry. Devoting the major part of his program to the works of Chopin, he once more revealed the delicacy of tone, his facile technique, his fine sympathy for the musical content of these so frequently heard piano studies.

Jan Smeterlin

His playing of the Schubert Sonata, Op. 143, with which he opened the program, again revealed the admirable quality of the Smeterlin touch and interpretation, the great simplicity and directness with which the artist approaches his music.

Six Paganini Studies by Liszt closed the program. Mr. Smeterlin's audience was quick to show its appreciation and the applause was of more than customary warmth.

Reform School Film

By MARTIN HANNON

Reform school abuses and wayward girls occupy the interest in "School for Girls," starring Anne Shirley, this week's film attraction at the RKO Keith Boston.

Although Miss Shirley is billed as the star, not much of this young lady is seen in the film. For she is cast as a frail inmate who dies before the story has run barely half its course.

The actual leading players are Sidney Fox, as a girl unjustly committed to the institution, and Paul Kelly, as the youthful waster appointed by chance to the state board, who brings about a badly needed reformation in the penal school.

"School for Girls" has moments of brightness, particularly in the antics of Ward A, a group of pretty young waywards.

Ranny Weeks introduces this week an unusually lively variety bill, with the Radio Ramblers heading the show with some skilled mimicry. Unusual dances are presented by Grace du Faye and Company; and other acts are Large and Morgner, Joe and Jane McKenna, Williams and Charles, and the increasingly popular Eleanor Sherry.

'Copperfield' Continues

At Loew's State, "David Copperfield," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film version of the most beloved of the Dickens classics, opened its second week yesterday.

The starry cast of Copperfield shows rare judgment on the part of Hollywood, for there could be no more satisfactory Micawber than W. C. Fields, no more manly and appealing young David than little Freddie Bartholomew, and no more excellent pair of Peggottys than Jessie Ralph and Lionel Barrymore.

OPERA 'ANOTHER' Triumph by Savoyard Group

By GEORGE HOLLAND

"H. M. S. Pinafore," the Gilbert and Sullivan story to music about a lass that loved a sailor, was played last night at the Colonial Theater.

Its reception proved that no resistance remains on the part of Boston's Gilbert and Sullivan followers to the charms of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company.

George Holland

Standing room only, with balcony boxes peopled, tells the news of the financial end of this seventh premiere by the visiting Savoyards.

• • •

Artistically, "H. M. S. Pinafore" proved no less happy. The quarterdeck of His Majesty's most famous light operatic vessel resounded to Sir Arthur Sullivan's stirring music, and Dick Deadeye, Captain Corcoran, Seaman Ralph Rackstraw and the other famous characters of the nautical concert were applauded tumultuously.

Derek Oldham, about whom this column has not said enough, played Ralph Rackstraw, the sailor that loved a lass. Muriel Dickson was the lass, the daughter of Captain Corcoran. Leslie Rands, Martyn Green, Marjory Eyre and Dorothy Gill—all these new Boston favorites—were cast in important roles.

• • •

More noticeable than at any previous premiere was the entrance applause given the principals of the Savoy company last night. It had the flavor of a reception given favorites of a long-established stock company.

"Cox and Box," the twin curtain-raiser of "Trial by Jury," in this repertory of Gilbert and Sullivan, preceded "H. M. S. Pinafore." Martyn Green played Cox, and John Dean, Box. Bouncer was Richard Walker. This is the skit which Sir W. S. Gilbert did not write. Maddison Morton and F. C. Burnand collaborated with Sir Arthur Sullivan on this one. It was enjoyed greatly, nevertheless.

• • •

One world premiere, the Boston opening of a New York success, the beginning of a third week for "The First Legion" at the Plymouth, and "Patience" by the Savoyards is Monday's program in the theaters.

"The Eldest" will be played for the first time on any stage at the Wilbur Theater, with Lillian Foster in the leading role. Mrs. Eugenie Courtright is the author, and Sinn Grisman, who had a hand in the production of the successful "Tobacco Road" is the producer.

Mervyn Le Roy Chosen to Direct Star

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Feb. 2—Mervyn Le Roy gets a chance to chalk up another hit in Marion Davies' "Page Miss Glory." He directs her first Warner Brothers' picture, and you may be sure that that decision was not made without a careful survey of all directorial possibilities.

Louella O. Parsons

Mervyn, according to the December box office checkup in the Motion Picture Herald, had more successes to his credit in 1934 than any other Hollywood director.

"Page Miss Glory" in the telling, sounds as if it had what it takes to bring people into the theater. And moreover, if Robert Lord and Delmar Daves were the adaptation of the Joseph Schrank and Phillip Dunning stage play as Mr. Lord outlined it, Marion's many admirers will be completely satisfied.

Just an aside to Marion—your public is complaining because you haven't made a picture since "Operator 13" last May. So I'll tell them you are starting March 1.

• • •

I am glad to tell those who heard Jean Harlow play a scene from "China Seas" on the radio when she appeared in "Hollywood Hotel" with me that "China Seas" is actually going into production. Irving Thalberg, who has postponed it so many times because Clark Gable was busy, is now conferring with Tay Garnett, the director, with a view to putting it into production in ten days. What a cast—Jean and Clark and now Wallace Beery in one of his typical characterizations will have an important role.

• • •

One of the best pictures of any year was "The Lost Patrol" which Victor McLaglen made for RKO. Now he is back on the RKO lot for "The Informer" with almost the same set-up. The new story by Liam O'Flaherty deals with the Irish rebels, and Wally Ford, who did the best work of his life in "The Lost Patrol," will also have an important part.

John Ford, who was director, and Dudley Nichols, the scenarist on "Lost Patrol" will be in the same capacities in the second McLaglen picture. But "The Informer" will be different in one respect—it will have one or two women with pretty little Heather Angel in the feminine lead.

• • •

May Robson must be pretty well satisfied with herself these days. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gave her a very small part in "Vanessa" and she played it as a favor to Louis B. Mayer. When they previewed the picture and the cards were returned, the criticisms said that there wasn't enough of May Robson. So-oo-o, the picture was called in, extra scenes written in for Miss Robson and her part built up. She plays an old lady over a hundred years old. In the original version she was killed off early but now she is allowed to live and put over some added comedy.

Well, the Theater Guild can't be shot for trying. They have made Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone a definite offer to co-star in the stage production of "The Postman Always Rings Twice," by James Cain. The play is now being read by Joan and Franchot and according to word from New York the Guild is willing to meet movie prices to get these two. Since Joan intends to go on the stage she couldn't make her debut under better auspices than the Theater Guild which always produces artistic plays but I'd hate to see her in a play that was so censorable as a book.

STAGE, SCREEN REVIEWS

Talent Holds Spotlights

Keith's Vaudeville Revival Scores

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Vaudeville as it used to be returned to a Boston stage yesterday in a parade of big-names mustered with canny daring from the headline ranks of the radio, the stage, and even the circus.

Joe Penner led the parade. The Boswell Sisters, Stan Kavanaugh, The Twelve Aristocrats and the Great Yacopis stepped on the comic heels of radio's funny man in stampeding a jubilant audience.

• • •

The reviewing stand of this costly procession is Keith's Memorial theater. That sumptuous monument to Boston's B. F. Keith, the great pioneer of American variety, held the largest first-day throng to pass through its turnstiles in many years.

• • •

There is not a grander bill of entertainment purchasable at the prices anywhere today.

With Dick Ryan and Monk Purcell assisting him, Joe rocked the audience with a "handcuff sketch."

The Boswell Sisters, radio's other famous headline act, scored with several numbers. Connie Boswell was plaintive and thrilling in her solo, "He Still My Heart," and the girls sang "Dinah" for a gay finish.

Stan Kavanaugh is still the world's greatest comic juggler, I think. The audience howled at him and chased him offstage in a thunderclap of applause.

• • •

The Twelve Aristocrats, six girls and six young men, with Michael, start the show. They really start it, too. The famous gymnasts, headliners in the biggest circus, the Great Yacopis, brought this jubilee bill to a breathless closing close.

Jimmy Durante, Lee Tracy and Sally Eilers and a child actor named Freddie Bartholomew enact a picture called "Carnival."

Revue Scollay Hit

A colorful and unusual song and dance presentation, the "Mary Miles Revue," tops the seven acts of vaudeville on the new Scollay bill.

A cast of talented principals contributes to the miniature musical comedy, with some of the fastest taps and the newest popular songs presented in typical Broadway manner.

Marshall Montgomery and Company, in "Shore Leave," one of the most skillful and popular of the ventriloquist acts in the variety catalogue, offer their novelty for the honors as runners-up, with plenty of comedy lines and a song or two added to their other accomplishments.

Other acts billed include Bill Telaak with Bill Brown and Sandra Ward in "The All-American Drawback," Castle, Betty and Faye, who open the show with some smart dance routines; Morgan and Stone, Lee Gresham and Gladys Blake and the sensational Sokl Family in some whirlwind acrobatics.

"The Secret Bride," a dramatic story of a governor's daughter who must keep her marriage a secret to keep her father from impeachment, brings Barbara Stanwyck, Warren William and Glenda Farrell to the screen.

Gala Bill

Duncans at Met

By JOYCE DANA

Those irrepressible imps of musical comedy, the Duncan Sisters, headline the double stage show on the new bill at the Metropolitan, which has as its screen attraction "Wings in the Dark."

Myrna Loy, whose most recent screen appearances have added immeasurably to her charm and to her stature as a comedienne, pairs up with Hollywood's newest dimpled darling and ascending star, Cary Grant.

On the eve of taking off for a solo flight to Paris, Grant, the most daring airman of them all, is blinded by a burst of flame from a defective gas stove.

Myrna is a trick flier herself, who, with the aid of an imaginative press agent and a few parachute jumps, makes a handsome if hazardous living. When things get too tough, a Moscow to New York flight, with a $23,000 award, takes her away from her lover and up above the clouds.

When she's lost in a zero-zero fog, with the petrol burning low, it's up to the blind but rugged airman to rescue her, with the aid of the gadgets he's been inventing. Of course he does.

Dave Apollon, another top line showman, brings his versatile accomplishments to his newest "International Varieties," a revue which features his skilled instrumentalists, Danzi Goodell, Lupa Mellon, Don Morrell, Don Donna, Justine Daniels, Harold Alona and the Elida Ballet in colorful routines.

Favorites on Stage

Nan Sunderland plays an important role in "Dodsworth," Walter Huston's play due at the Colonial a week from Monday.

Bert Lytell's popularity has caused an extension of the original two weeks' engagement of "The First Legion," at the Plymouth.

Vincent Club Prepares For Annual Show

By BETTY ALDEN

THE BUGLE CALL has sounded for the first call to arms of the bevy of Vincent Clubbers who will be as busy as bees until the middle of March with plans for the annual Vincent Revue to be presented at the Wilbur Theater on March 14, 15 and 16 . . . As in former years the proceeds of the show will be donated to the Vincent Memorial Hospital . . .

The team captains have had their first meeting with Mrs. Gardiner H. Fiske, second vice-president of the club, to outline their plans for getting the debutantes started on soliciting advertisements for the program . . .

Veterans of shows of other years, experienced in the ways of the Vincent Club, are serving as team captains . . . Mrs. William Elwell, Mrs. Hamilton Osgood, Mrs. Gelston King, Mrs. Shaw Sprague, Mrs. Terry Collens, Mrs. William L. Shearer, and two of last year's debutantes who are having their first experience as "executives" of the show, Miss Patricia Bird and Miss Helen Marshall . . .

Engagement

WITH THE FLURRY of engagements of daughters of our first families to out-of-town men, it is not surprising to hear that Franklin Warren Hobbs, Jr., has picked a belle of Morristown, New Jersey, as the lady of his choice . . . Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stedman are making known today the betrothal of their daughter, Hilda Clifford Stedman, to Mr. Hobbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs of Commonwealth avenue . . .

Miss Stedman attended Foxcroft school in Virginia and was presented to society in 1928 . . .

PATRICIA BIRD

Mr. Hobbs, brother of Miss Rebekah Hobbs, was in the class of 1919 at Harvard and served as a lieutenant in the U. S. Navy during the war . . . He is now engaged in the cotton business in New Bedford and lives in South Dartmouth, where, after a June wedding, he and his bride-to-be will make their home . . .

Treats for Musical Group

PATRONS OF THE ARTS, and especially of music, will find two very delightful events on their concert calendar this month which social music lovers are doing their utmost to make smart social events as well as the inspiring artistic experiences which they are bound to be . . .

On Wednesday the Boston Morning Musicales will present Jascha Heifetz at the Hotel Statler at 11 o'clock . . . Miss Lucy Rantoul, who has directed the debutante ushers at these concerts during the season, has added Molly Rogers to her list of assistants and the committee in charge of the Musicales has announced new members, including Mrs. Harry T. Hayward, Mrs. Horace S. Frazer, Mrs. Frank Cheever Nichols and Mrs. Charles F. Sprague . . .

Mid-morning coffee will be served in the foyer by Mrs. Winthrop Cochran Adams, Mrs. Frank A. Day, Mrs. Cutler B. Downer and Mrs. W. Stuart Forbes . . . Their assistants will be Mrs. Frank S. Deland, Mrs. Alfred Matless, Mrs. Richard Waters, Mrs. Durham Jones, Mrs. Stephen Paine, Mrs. Frank A. Day, Jr., Mrs. Harry S. Parsons, Mrs. Arthur Black and Mrs. Clarence E. Ordway . . .

Plan for Music Festival

ALWAYS TO THE FORE IN furthering cultural affairs, Mrs. John W. Bartol, Mrs. George Bemis, Mrs. Reginald W. Bird, Mrs. Theodore G. Bremer, Miss Frances G. Curtis and Mrs. Robert L. DeNormandie are members of the large group of distinguished Bostonians sponsoring the Twelfth International Music Festival at Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, February 24.

This unique attraction, the only one of its kind in the United States, will offer an opportunity to hear characteristic folk songs of eight different countries, as well as choral masterpieces from the classical music library . . .

Additional sponsors include Miss Eleanor Allen, Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, Mrs. David J. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lee, Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, Mrs. William Ellery Sedgewick, Mrs. Henry D. Tudor, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. David A. Westcott, Miss Mary C. Wheelwright, Mrs. Eva Whiting White, W. Duncan Russell, Dr. Archibald T. Davison and David D. Scannell . . .

Treasure Harvard Award

MARY McELWAIN GLEASON is exhibiting in the most prominent place among her laces and penates, the shining cup which her husband, Francis Gleason, has just been awarded by the Harvard Varsity Club for his exceptional performance on the baseball team in the 1934 season . . . the trophy is the Dana Wingate Memorial Cup . . .

The second in the series of Empire Dances will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Vendome next Friday evening, February 8. The first of this series of dances given under distinguished patronage was one of the largest and jolliest parties of the season, as it was a re-union of young married people and girls who have been out for more than one season, and the young men who are their contemporaries.

Among those on the committee who are giving dinners before the dance on February 8 are Miss Margareta Ericson, whose dinner guests number thirty; Miss Priscilla Hedge, a dinner for fourteen; Mr. and Mrs. B. Allen Rowland, a dinner for fourteen, and Mr. and Mrs. George Kuehn, a dinner for fourteen.

LOVE DENIED

Stuart Hates Idea of Using Sharlene's Money

By Louise Long and Ethel Doherty

CHAPTER XVIII

He did not comprehend the pent-up state of her nerves as she stood beside him and made saucy comments on everything.

As they moved up the inner basin, they saw crowds of people on the dock, dressed in tropical white and gay colors. Across the blue water they looked like a fluttering nosegay, more particularly as the scent of the flower leis they held was wafted to the shi in waves of pungent perfume.

Then the Hawaiian band, on shore, struck up the plaintive "Song of the Islands." For no reason at all, unless it was the haunting melancholy of the tune, Sharlene suddenly sobbed aloud. Stuart glanced at her quickly.

She had bent over the rail, pulling her hat down over her eyes and was weeping an untrollable flood of tears. He took her arm and hurried her past the waving, shouting passengers —all fortunately engrossed in the excitement of landing. It was dreary in her stateroom, hot and stifling, the bed unmade, discarded flowers in the basket.

Sharlene threw herself full length on the bed and cried with the despairing abandon of a child, unable to stop. It was the first time in her life she had ever wept this way.

"You've repressed yourself too much," said Stuart, patting her shoulder helplessly. "You've been afraid of hurting me. I'd rather have you cry it out."

After a while she sat up. "This is too awful! You're missing all the color—it's as much fun to land in Honolulu. I'm just a beast!"

He protested sincerely: "You're a real good sport—"

"Oh!" she cried, as if he had struck her. "Don't say that!"

He realized with horror that he had used Kent Damerell's favorite expression.

The sounds of music and the clamor of glad welcome died away on the pier, while Sharlene made herself presentable. When they finally disembarked even the lei women had departed.

Katie waited anxiously beside the bags. In depressing silence they made their way to the curb where Stuart hailed a couple of taxis to take them out to the hotel.

"This is the last time I'll do that, Stuart," said Sharlene, as she sank back in the cab. "If I can't summon courage enough to meet my Good Friday like—like you've met yours—then you can dump me off the end of the pier!"

"There'll be no dumping." He pressed her hand hard. Let me get you some of those wreaths. Hey, boy, stop a minute!"

He bought sweet smelling ginger leis, and delicate little pikaki ones, heavy, fragrant ropes of camellias and carnations, and piled them around Sharlene's neck to the tip of her charming nose.

Above the flowers her eyes were smiling again, and Stuart was content.

The Island days passed in a whirl of kaleidoscopic color, filled with sighing harmonies of steel guitars and plaintive voices of brown singers, and a swift, surging countercurrent of hard hospitality. Stuart spun ceaselessly, again, but now in spinning he was learning to arrest his mind and contemplate things, as he did on his Hollywood hill-top.

His eyes were upon Sharlene often, anxiously, as she gyrated . . . for her there was left only this mad dashing about in pursuit of pleasure, to drive out her body so that she might sleep—and forget.

For one thing Stuart was increasingly grateful: Sharlene did not loathe him when she awoke to the full realization of her pain. When that tortured look came into her eyes and her gaze sought the Eastern horizon, he drew out to Stuart's arms and silently asked for help. Kent Damerell never intruded himself by single words. But they both knew that he was there, the specter at the marriage feast. And the top of life kept spinning . . .

Sharlene rushed Stuart to a cocktail party up Moana Valley. They were late, of course, the party being cocktails and cocktails ahead of them. Stuart was not even allowed to look at a perfect rainbow which spanned the valley higher up, where the rays of the setting sun struck through the rain mist on the mountains.

"Thash a rainbow," said his host. "Millions of 'em all time. Look—I aged thish okoleshau m'self—in charcoal—which a rainbow?"

"But the colors are more clearly defined than any I've ever seen," said Stuart going to a window. "See, Sharlene, there are two—"

"Here," insisted the host, "when you've had a coupla these you can see three rainbows." Guarantee it!"

"We can't stay long enough to see three rainbows," Sharlene regretfully told him. "We're due pretty soon at a Japanese dinner."

"Well, saki on top of this—and you'll belong to the Rainbow Division. Ha! Ha!" There was much laughter. . . .

And so the top spun. Stuart found himself in a frail, Japanese tea-house above a noisy stream, his shoes discarded at the door. They all donned kimonos, and knelt around a low table, consuming delectable clam soup and a noble dish of chicken and vegetables and eggs cooked on a charcoal brazier at the table by a little Japanese maid. Hot saki to drink. Sharlene's face across from him, a little hazy through the smoke of many cigarettes, but a flushed, animated, laughing Sharlene. His head began buzzing with the queer high sing-song of the local patois —Japanese and Hawaiian and American—indulged in by some of the guests and the Japanese maid, as she stirred the suki yaki. "Plenty pupule," giggling. "Pla-anty whine like basie—" To Stuart, this became the whine of the top which was himself, spinning. Spinning on and on, being very gay for Sharlene.

Whirling to Waikiki, the whole party, for a moonlight swim. Everybody piling out of the three taxicabs, laughing and chattering and scrambling for their bathing togs.

"Come on, everybody." Sharlene's voice. "Have you all got your suits? No, no, Tubby—Stuart will pay the taxies."

Stuart took out his wallet. It had been getting thinner and thinner. Just tips and things like taxi fares and the clothes for himself that had become imperative. The hotel bills had been paid out of Mrs. Standring's generous letter of credit which she had called a wedding present in her note to Stuart. Sharlene flung money about recklessly, paying by check, and seldom had any cash in her purse for small things. She had used Stuart's funds unthinkingly. She would have been appalled if she had realized that she had flung away the proceeds of two of his pictures—that it was all he had. It had not occurred to her yet that, of course, Stuart was penniless. Penniless—she did not know the meaning of the word! Her mother had always handled the finances on their trips. Naturally she looked to Stuart to do the same, without thinking any more of the source of supply now than she did then.

Not only was it impossible for him to pay for things for his wife, but his wife was going to have to pay for things for him. Food, shaves—ye gods! Shoeshines, pin-money. Even the flower leis he had ordered for her daily. She would have to pay for her own flowers—if she had any. His little notes: "A Camelia Lei, this morning, Sharlene, because they're like your throat." Yes, and a sweet little bill enclosed, too . . .

Tomorrow he would have to ask Sharlene for money. There was no reprieve . . .

"Come on, Stuart! Don't be so exclusive! Race you out to the float!"

He roused himself to accept the challenge, then drove through the water with keen, powerful strokes. But the taste in his mouth was very, very bitter, more bitter than the salt of the sea.

Abhorring Evil Discussed by

Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

What relation is there between abhorring evil and having happiness? Have you thought it out?

For thousands are stripped by the insidious delusion that the tang and fun of life is to be found by exploring illicit pleasures.

Day after day, joy hungry men and women, frantically panting after alleviation of tedium and melancholy, hungry for joy, try to find it at the expense of their moral sense, by seeking to taste the varied forbidden fruits. And who has ever found permanent joy that way?

It's a hoax and a delusion. The purveyors of all forms of sin have to use every device and artifice to retint the faded illusion that in the side show of sin there is more delight than in the main tenet of virtue.

Yet a European, on a distinguished occasion in France, recently warned his countrymen that one rarely heard the word virtue any more, or the praise of it.

The last result of war's aftermath is that we are still bewitched, still unawsre of the true clue in man's perennial pursuit of happiness.

There is a discerning tribute in the 45th Psalm: "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity, wherefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."

If you feel that you are eminently not anointed with the oil of gladness above your fellows, trace out the reason why.

Do you hate and abhor what is evil?

Or, if technically not guilty, do you fondly linger as near its border line as you can?

And may that not be responsible for the fact that the All Holy God does not shine His most radiant joyousness upon you.

For the pure in heart see God. That is their sufficient reward.

And when our hearts are even part way bent on wrong, we have lost the clarity of spiritual health and well being.

Thus such good counsellors as St. Paul, among the wise precepts of the 12th Chapter of Romans, warns: "Abhor that which is evil." Hate it, stay away from it. Take sides against it, give it no quarter, for moral evil is the enemy of the human race.

By many modern channels, movies, cheap literature, and such, this age has a widened knowledge of evil. And becoming used to it at so early an age tends to lessen the sense of shock and detestation. And thus defenses are down, while over the dykes torrents of muddy water flow.

But let us not drink this stuff. Let us not condone it.

With whatever sense of diet for the soul and character that remains, let us abhor evil for ourselves and our friends, and seek only good.

There should surely be a strong enough section of the population to assume again the lead in the eternal war against evil, as we re-echo the prophet's call: "O ye that love the Lord, see that ye hate the thing that is evil."

BEATRICE FAIRFAX ADVISES GIRLS ON LOVE

Love at Low Ebb When Divorce Is Pastime

DIVORCE is a thing we used to think of as a painless release from a situation that couldn't be endured.

Is it coming, I wonder, to seem a little more like a move in a game of checkers—the good player, of course, being the one who is never left in an exposed or embarrassing position?

The clever girl used to be the one who could "hold" her husband, keep him the happy and contented lover, gently but firmly force every other woman out of the picture.

Is the woman now considered most successful who loses her husbands as quickly and as frequently as she can, always immediately replacing them?

Conspicuous and wealthy women who make rather a fad of collecting husbands have perhaps led the rest of us a little astray on this point.

Many nice young wives are, I am afraid, becoming a little confused in their ideas of marriage. Girls who are luckily provided with good sound husbands, and who ought to be prompted by common sense as well as by love to keep them safely padlocked, seem to have the notion that the snappy course is, first, to find a new boy-friend; second, to pick a domestic quarrel; third, to start for Reno.

One of these girls, "Disillusioned Bride," has written me, plainly stating what she thinks is her problem.

"I am 22," she says, "and I have been married a year. There are a lot of things I don't like about my marriage. My husband is terribly stingy in regard to my clothes and he flirts a lot with another girl, who I think is in love with him. I would like very much to get a divorce. But to tell the truth, I am not perfectly certain whom I should marry next. Do you think a girl is foolish to try for a divorce before she has secured her next husband?

"Nobody would deny that Mary Pickford is a model for all girls. Now we see that there are things she wouldn't stand for in her gadding husband, and she has let him go. And I don't think she has another man around the corner, either. Don't you think that ought to be a warning to men to watch their step? What shall I do?"

Divorce should not be a subject of day-dreams on the part of a girl who, like the writer of this letter, has it within her power to ruin her life or make a success of it. What she should do, of course, is to put her energy into making their home and their marriage so agreeable that her husband will have no taste for stray flirtations.

As an emergency measure, too much cannot be said in praise of divorce. As a mere pastime for unoccupied young wives, I cannot recommend it.

Who Loves More Ardently

Men or Women?

H. L. MENCKEN, author, critic, brilliant satirist:

"Never having been a woman, I can't answer your question. But it seems to me that, so far as men are concerned, the influence of the charming enchantment, called love is probably a great deal less than it is commonly represented to be by poets, psycho-analysts and other such lunatics.

"Love can make life stupendously pleasant, but it is no more necessary than alcohol."

WALTER WINCHELL, famous Broadway commentator, says:

"I think women do. A man can always put on a clean collar and forget about it. But it is not so easy for a woman to regain her dignity after the humiliation of a thwarted love affair."

MAGISTRATE JEANETTE BRILL, prominent woman jurist:

"Emotions are emotions, the same whether in a man or a woman. Of course, temperament and environment have a lot to do with love.

"There is no difference between the love of a man for a woman and the love of a woman for a man.

"Both love just as earnestly, deeply and intensely."

Why Don't You Get Married?

By Nell Brinkley

There is PEACE at the table with the girl alone, and the one with the young man alone, she in her tiny dinette, he in a cold-colored one-of-a-million restaurants —PEACE if by that you mean lack of noise, and the troubles, that comes with a bigger table.

But that's the best you can say for the lonely table. Pleasure sits at the bigger one, only SLIGHTLY bigger. Pleasure, and laughter, and love.

Wouldn't you trade two lonely, little, peaceful tables for one bigger, more exciting one — you two who are apart?

Adele Garrison's Love Serial

DOORS BOLTED AS DANGER NEARS

CHAPTER 258

I DOUBT if an aggregation of pontiffs, potentates and presidents, no matter how puissant, would have any success in overawing Katie, if she once got well started on one of her rampages.

That Jim realized how near she was to explosion on account of her ungrateful curiosity I was sure, when he hastily added the postscript, "The Chink's gone batty," to his mandate to "beat it, quick! I've got to get back in there."

Then, with something eminently like the attitude of one who has thrown a piece of raw meat to wolves following a sleigh, he turned and hurried back into the room he had left.

The sound of the closing door, and of the turning key that followed, was evidently the last straw laid upon my little maid's overburdened patience. I had paused to watch her, and when I saw her bring her clenched hands high above her head and shake them, the while she muttered tensely, "Oh! I could kill! I could kill!" I knew that it was time for me to take a hand in bringing us back to normalcy.

"ALMOST, KATIE

I hated to use the one infallible weapon, always at my hand, but there was nothing else for me to do save to play upon her devotion to me, always an instrument ready tuned for use. But there was also real need of her, and a medium of truth in the appeal I made to her.

"Katie!" I called softly. "I need you. I am dizzy and faint. Will you help me up the stairs?"

She dropped her hands inertly at the sound of my voice, and then came plunging across the room to me, put my head down against her shoulder.

"Don't say anything! Don't move!" I adjured her. "Just let me rest here a minute. I shall be all right presently."

Sobered, quieted, as she always is by sudden need on the part of anyone of us whom she serves so faithfully, she put her strong arms beneath my elbows and held me without utterance.

For fully two minutes we stood there, and then, calmed as if something of my faithful little maid's sturdy strength had been conveyed to me, I raised my head and stirred within the circle of her arms.

"Ky you, no stand still another moment, or two, tree?" she commanded. "Feel you dizzy, you can walk?"

"But I'm not dizzy now, Katie," I protested. "I think you have cured me."

She giggled irrepressibly.

"I tink I bring me outt schtrait as ven doctor," she said, and then a voice from above us said softly, inquiringly:

"Madge?"

"Oh, Lillian!" I breathed. "Are the children all right?"

"Sound asleep, and locked in for the moment," she said. "I have the key right here in my mitt. But come upstairs. You and Katie can stage that wrestling match up here just as well as on the stairs."

I knew that she was speaking this lightly in order to give me the impression that she was completely at ease about the children, but Katie evidently took the pleasantry as uttered solely for her benefit.

"You so funny, Mosais Underwood," she said between giggles. "I could snoost die laughing ven you talk like dot."

"I'll advise you any time you like," Lillian told her carelessly, then chanted a sort of obligato above Katie's giggles.

"Conte into the nursery and see for yourself how safe the children are. They're all right. And then from below we heard a rush of footsteps and a hoarse shout:

"Look out, up there!"

Send WEDDING Gift Ahead OF TIME

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I am going to a church wedding followed by a reception in the church parlors. What is the proper way to give money as a gift? Should it be in the form of a personal check, money order, or just the cash with a card?

2—Is it proper for the sister of the bride to be an attendant?

R.

1—Your wedding gift should be sent before the wedding, 10 days or a week before, if possible. If you are giving money for your wedding present, it is best to send it in the form of a check, and the check should be accompanied by a note explaining that you thought that the bride-to-be might like to buy with this money something that she would especially like to have for her new home.

If you haven't a checking account, or if for some reason you don't wish to send a check, send your gift in the form of a money order. But don't send it in the form of money!

2—Yes, usually the sister of the bride is the maid of honor, or if married, the matron of honor.

In Defense of Squeeze Play

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

So much has been written about the execution of the squeeze play that it seems high time that more be said about the defense of it.

One of the primary defenses against the squeeze is the destruction of entries, a principle familiar to all experts.

George J. Kennedy, a well-known Brooklyn expert, found an excellent opportunity to make use of this principle in a recent duplicate tournament.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ K J 10♡ K J 7 3◇ Q♣ K Q 10 5 4 | |
| (Kennedy)♠ A 7 3♡ 10 9 8 4◇ K J 9 6♣ 7 6 | NorthW ESouth | ♠ 8 5 4♡ Q 6 2◇ 8 4 3 2♣ 9 3 2 |
| | ♠ Q 9 6 2♡ A 5◇ A 10 7 5♣ A J 8 | |

The bidding was silly and after every suit had been bid, North and South staggered into a contract of six notrump which Kennedy in the West position enthusiastically doubled.

He opened the ten of hearts, on which the Jack was played, and East's Queen forced the Ace.

Declarer then led a small spade and Mr. Kennedy played low, holding off until the third round of spades.

He saw that five club tricks, three spades, two hearts and one diamond trick were safely and soundly tucked away in declarer's pocket and that since he held the only controlling cards in the two red suits a squeeze would be operated against him if he did not cut the line of communication.

Accordingly, out came the King of diamonds, taking out declarer's last entry to his own hand, and forestalling the squeeze.

Notice that it was vital for Mr. Kennedy to hold off the King and Jack of spades since otherwise declarer would have had the opportunity to create a spade entry by overtaking the ten with the Queen when he found it necessary to re-enter his hand.

SOUP Tureens ARE BACK In Style

By MARTHA LEE

FAMILY MEALS to prepare? They should be hearty to take the chill off these cold winter evenings.

First there is the soup—steaming bowls of rich soup, and if you can unearth an old soup tureen you will add a smart touch to the table and increase the ease and simplicity of service.

Don't forget the crisp salad greens and crisp relishes, along with the hot main order, with a seasonable dessert. Top this off with hot coffee and you will have a meal that many families will relish on a wintry evening.

TURN YOUR BACK

Amusing Double-Faced House Frock

By MARIAN MARTIN

When your back is turned you'll be a complete surprise in this attractive, easy-to-make little house frock.

The sleeves which seem to button on in front, appear to tie on in back—so does the high, rounded skirt which is held by buttoned-on belt in front.

An amusing change from your present frocks, and a comfortable one, too. A new salmon pink shade, or any colorful ground with bouquets of flowers, would be especially lovely for fashioning this cotton dress, whose pattern imparts a secret as to the utter simplicity of its making. Pattern 9246 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards 36 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style, number and size of each pattern.

Correct apparel to start the season—frocks for balmy days—the fashionable bridal party gowns—how to dress your child—especially designed dresses for those with weight problems.

Forty pages of absorbing fashion features—and every garment is one you can make with our easy-to-use Marian Martin Patterns!

Send for your copy now! Price of book fifteen cents, but it costs only ten cents when ordered with a pattern. Pattern and book together, twenty-five cents.

Send your order to the Boston American Pattern Department, 232 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y.

Guide to New Book

By MILES ALDEN

AUNT MARGOT—By Doris Peel—Houghton, Mifflin.

No discerning reader will be able to resist the quiet charm and unostentatious sophistication of these short stories. Not only do they stamp their author as a consummate artist, but they are proof positive once again that mellow wine is the best wine.

Just now, when there is a taste for the bizarre, the sensational and the freakish abroad, it is good to come upon a writer who confounds all the hectic Saroyans by telling a simple story simply.

But Miss Peel is old-fashioned in so far as she is not lazy enough to write every haphazard thought that comes to her mind and call the result a story. Apparently, she still believes in rhyme and reason—and effort.

Her effort is a rich reward for the reader. He will search long before he finds 10 other short stories as good as those in this book. And it will be a long time, indeed, before he finds a writer who can portray the viewpoint of a child as effectively as convincingly as Miss Peel does in "Aunt Margot."

TRIGGER JOHN'S SON—By Tom Robinson—The Viking Press.

A small town must be a boy's heaven. That is something of which we city-born chaps got little more than a suspicion during summers in the country. But now comes a book to confirm the idea.

It is a very convincing small town in Pennsylvania that Mr. Robinson has drawn in "Trigger John's Son," and some very convincing boys and adults, too. The story briefly is that of an orphan, "Trigger," who decides to have a look at the parents who propose to adopt him before they really do so.

"Trigger" is very much impressed by the old Englishman who respects his freedom and lets him alone. The more he is let alone the better he likes the man. It is such glimpses into the psychology of boyhood that make this book more than a novel.

Contrast Food Flavors and Colors

YOU ARE probably very particular about your silver, china, glass and the flowers you use at the dinner table. But are you equally particular about how you arrange your food on the plates? Do you make them a picture, too?

Foods should be combined with an eye to their artistic effect, and their flavor contrast.

For instance the dark green of spinach forms a good color scheme for the dark red of beets, but if you and a slice of tomato, the two shades of red create a clash of color.

With a big juicy steak, the green of Brussels sprouts is more interesting than if you serve colorless shredded cabbage or mashed turnips.

The contrast in flavors is equally important.

Two mild flavored vegetables such as mashed potatoes and mashed squash are much less interesting than one mild flavored vegetable and one of a more decided flavor, such as mashed potatoes and Brussels sprouts.

On the other hand, two strong flavored vegetables such as turnips and cauliflower are equally uninteresting.

Two creamed dishes should never be served at the same meal, and it is best not to serve a cream soup if a creamed vegetable is to follow.

Hand Beautifier

By the Beauty Editor

CALL US A sentimentalist if you like, but we are one hundred per cent Victorian—and proud of it—when it comes to the care of the hands.

If hands don't come in for reorganization at this season of the year, don't be surprised when they show signs of woeful neglect over that winning hand of bridge.

Why is it that many women who realize the importance of regular facial care, are singularly neglectful in the matter of beautifying their hands? Because they are constantly in evidence—over the tea table, at dinner, while reading — they should be above reproach at all times, soft, white and exquisitely smooth textured.

* * *

An application of a good cream or lotion twice a day will do wonders to spirit away the disfiguring, betraying signs of age. It's every bit as important to give your hands a smooth transparent finishing touch after putting down to lunch or dinner, as powdering your nose, or combing your hair. A trip home, and bath of cucumbers, that you can easily make at home, will protect your hands from the chapping of winter winds. It will also soften and whiten them and restore their natural loveliness.

* * *

Massage this cream well into the hands, working around the fingertips, knuckles and wrists. Rub skin gently and thoroughly into the skin as though you were working your hands into a pair of gloves.

This lotion is excellent to use on the arms as well. A brisk massage now and then with coconut oil, will do them worlds of good, also. If the elbows look grey, do not neglect to rub them into a cut lemon, and follow with an oil massage. If you want to minimize your arms, I know of a splendid method than using Indian clubs.

Beauty Answers

Question: Some friends of mine recently went on a three-day liquid diet. They were well pleased with the results and lost a number of pounds. Now what I want to know is whether it is a safe diet and one which you can take as often as you feel like it? And can you eat crackers when dieting, and drink tea or coffee?

Frances D., Arlington.

Answer: A three-day liquid diet is an undertaking on the system and is perfectly safe. It serves also as a complexion purifier. You can drink clear tea and coffee, clear soups, clam broth, butter milk and unsweetened lemonade besides the liquids mentioned in the diet. If you feel pangs of hunger, a few crackers will appease that feeling. To obtain my three-day liquid diet, write to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SCENTED JEWELRY

"RINGS on her fingers and bells on her toes" is an old story, but scented jewelry is new. Threestranded bracelets of polished beads cut from fragrant sandalwood are exotic and exciting. From India come silver rings which dangle clusters of perfumed berries, and daily carved scented shoe buckles to adorn the untrimmed pump. Then there's a gorgeous necklace of silver filigree beads, a tiny drop of perfume being sealed in each bead.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

'Moored in Mid-Air'

Three Hundred Feet Above the Earth, Boy Is Rescued Just in Time

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Hop into the knickers, folks, and get out them old Alpine-stock! Let's go mountain-climbing! We'll pop along with James Coghlan. He lives at 7214 Fifth ave., in Brooklyn, nowadays, but when this thriller happened his home was in Bristol, England.

FLOYD GIBBONS

It's on the banks of the Avon, about where that famous stream cuts its way through a deep gorge and flows down into the Bristol channel. Across that chasm there's a big suspension bridge. It carries the traffic from Gloucester to Somerset. High up in the air that roadway is. Something like 300 feet above the water line, and anchored in the great cliffs that rise almost straight up from the river bed.

You know, there was a big fascination about those cliffs. Every red-blooded kid that lived in that neighborhood had the ambition to climb 'em from the bottom right up to the bridge. No one had ever done it. But somehow there seemed to be a constant challenge in them that seemed to say, "Come on, now, if you've got the courage, you can make it."

The boys used to play there. They'd get up a few feet, scratching along with hands and feet in the fissures between the rocks. Then they'd get stuck, or scared, and carefully make their way back down again. There was a big kick in it, and they used to play the game of cliff-climbing like other youngsters play "duck on the rock." Each one vied with the other in deeds of daring—to see how far he could go up the rocky wall.

Usually they didn't get very far. A tough obstruction in that straight-up trail would turn them back. Always there seemed to be dead-ends to whatever course they took.

Well, sir, came that day when Jimmy and three of his friends decided to do a little cliff-climbing. They were over on the Gloucester side. The rocks were dry. The morning sun had taken all the dew from them and the going was fairly easy. Jimmy was in the lead.

He found some new and unexplored footholds and handholds. On he went, clutching the jagged rocks, digging his toes into the little cracks between them. Up and up. He didn't look down to see how his friends were making it. He was on a hot adventure. Jimmy was on his way to the bridge, 300 feet above the ground. What a feat that would be! Wouldn't every boy in town—and for miles around—envy him! He was going to make it! From the river to the bridge.

Jimmy was nearing his goal. Only 60 feet more to the top. Three hundred feet above the ground. He came upon a ledge and stopped for breath. He reached out in every direction, but there was no further means of progress, sidewise or upward. He was halted. The ledge was barely two feet wide and very shallow. How he got there he hardly knows. But he does know that there wasn't any way to get off it. A small projecting rock above his head afforded something to hold to, although it was precarious even at that.

There was no turning back. No way to slip down the way he'd come. It's lots easier to get up than to get down when you're doing mountain climbing. The wise adventurer always figures out his way back before he goes up.

Well, the boys down below saw Jimmy's predicament. They realized he was in a tough spot. Terrorized they ran to a well-keeper a half mile away. He spread the alarm and before long city officials were on the job.

People rushed madly about on the bridge shouting to each other what ought to be done. Nobody did anything. The whole town gathered, gazing down in horror at the boy caught there on the cliff-side.

He could see little of what was going on above him. He didn't dare lean out to look below. Hours passed. He was growing weaker. His frantic clinging to the little jutting rock was sapping his strength. How long could he hold on? Why didn't some one send help? Didn't they know he was ready to fall? Fear, stark, staring fear shook his frame. He took long breaths. He prayed.

Night was coming on. The terror of the dark was added to that sinking feeling that at any moment he might lose his hold on the little edge of rock. Three hundred feet below! He could envision that terrible, breath-taking moment when his knees would buckle and then ——.

There was no chance to rest or relax. It was strain, strain, strain to maintain his position on that narrow ledge.

The sun was sinking in the west. The bridge was black with spectators. But nobody seemed able to do anything to help that boy from his perilous perch.

Jimmy was getting tired. He felt dizzy, beginning to sway dark, shadowy forms loomed before his eyes. Unconsciousness had loomed too that, but he knew that now he would be too weak to cling to it. His aching arms quivered under the effort of holding his swaying body from falling into those cavernous depths below.

Jimmy doesn't remember what happened. It was all like a dream, one of those dreams that it's impossible to reconstruct. From the bridge above police let down a rope with loops on it in which he could wrap his body without having to hold on. He was swinging in mid-air. He was bumping against something. He was lying on his back. He was being carried some place. He was on a stretcher, carried by Bobbies.

At the hospital, when he regained his senses, he found that in his semi-stupor he had responded to directions screamed to him from the bridge. He had been in a virtual trance, but his subconscious mind had made him do what they told him to. He had worn his belt in the rope loops—and just correct names.

When they figured it up, Jimmy had been on a ledge of rock, on that narrow ledge with nothing between him and eternity but a courageous heart. And to this day Jimmy can't quite recall how he got into the loops of rope that pulled him to safety.

Listen, World
BY ELSIE ROBINSON

Somebody—I don't know who—wrote a whole creed in seven words—

"It's not heroic
"To be a Stoic."

A queer creed, that, to many of the older generation. For stoicism, or its more pious form of resignation, was held to be a supreme virtue.

And still is.

If there were some dark mystery you couldn't understand, some cruel evil you couldn't cure, you decided it was "the will of God" and let it go at that.

Elsie Robinson

Indeed, to doubt was heresy—to rebel was blasphemy. Both punishable, once, by torture and death.

Punishable yet, even in our modern civilization, with sneers and jeers.

For we still admire those who "suffer in silence," and are riled by those who question and raise Cain with the Status Quo.

And the reason, of course, is plain. It's really much easier for lazy, cowardly, conceited human nature to be resigned about misfortune than it is to try to cure it.

They Disturb Comfort

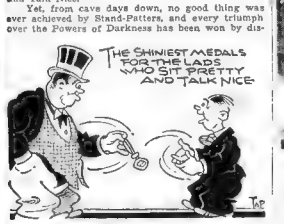
People who cure things challenge everyone's complacency—disturb everyone's comfort.

Also, they take frightful chances with their own safety and reputation. And if you want to remain a hero in the public eye, you've got to take chances with them.

So, naturally, all cautious Pillars of Society deplore and discourage rebels and reformers, and reserve the shiniest medals for the lads who Sit Pretty and Talk Nice.

Yet, from cave days down, no good thing was ever achieved by Stand-Patters, and every triumph over the Powers of Darkness has been won by discontended citizens who believe they were being done dirt and decided to do something about matters.



And there's actually no fouler blasphemy than to say that ignorance and fear, poverty and pain are "the will of God."

Sickening Conditions

The Plague—you shudder, today, as you read of the ghastly havoc it wrought in the Middle Ages. Whole communities wiped out in a night . . . narrow streets piled high with rotting bodies.

It sickens you to read of medical conditions even 50 years ago. Great surgeons operating in velvet jackets—eight out of ten patients dying of infection.

Childbirth almost as fatal as smallpox—the simplest rules of hygiene still unknown.

Yes, you thank God, today, that science has found a way to stop such filth. But you didn't go around thanking God for science when the plague was at its height.

You bowed to God's will like a good Christian—or were boiled in oil for your heresy.

"Our intellectual forefathers" are another source of pride. You honor them for their defiance—glory in their spunk.

They could have used a little of that glory, poor lads—for what a panning they got from the Leading Citizens then!

Dissenting Unhealthy

Yes, dissenting has always been unhealthy—and still is. You're strong for progress—says you.

But how do you feel when you hear someone criticizing Marriage, blaming Parents, arraigning the Government?

How friendly are you to any new idea which challenges your personal comfort?

What's YOUR private opinion of Hot Heads who aren't content to leave things as they are?

"It's not heroic
"To be a Stoic"—

But it's still your best bet if you want to be popular!

SURPRISE! BUT WEDDING IS HALTED BY IRATE WIFE

Mrs. Kurt Hermsdorf of Manchester, N. H., went with police to the Marriage License Bureau in City Hall when her husband appeared he was arrested. Then Mrs. Hermsdorf went to his car and explained to her "prospective-to-be," Ena Soderberg of Shrewsbury, that the man was married. She had not known. Both women were sorry for each other.

Man and Girl at Marriage Bureau, But Wife Steps In

Mrs. Kurt Hermsdorf of Manchester, N. H., told Boston police she believed her husband would apply for the marriage license.

Then with detectives she went to City Hall and waited. Ten minutes later Hermsdorf appeared at the marriage license bureau and he was seized by the officers.

Quizzed on the whereabouts of the bride-to-be, Enid Soderberg, of Shrewsbury, Hermsdorf replied "she's sitting outside in the car."

Hermsdorf was booked on a charge of violation of the marriage license laws.

Mrs. Hermsdorf said to the girl "I am terribly sorry that this had to happen, but there was nothing else for me to do."

Miss Soderberg said

"I am sorry, too. It is even worse for you because you are the mother of two children. I did not know he was married.

"I met him seven months ago. He was introduced to me by a friend who also was unaware of his marriage.

"He saw me every night for seven months. We went to shows and dances and visited homes of our respective friends. I thought he was a lovely fellow. He was always very nice to me."

Weeping as she talked, she continued

"We became engaged last September and he gave me this ring. He paid more than $200 for it.

"I gave up my position last December. We were to be married on Christmas Day.

"Just before Christmas he suggested that we delay the wedding for a few weeks and I agreed. Last week we decided that we would be married immediately and we came to Boston to file our intentions.

Calls Self 'Lucky'

"I can't understand why some of his friends didn't tell me about him having a wife. It seems to me that at least one of them must have known it.

"But I am glad now that I have found out before we were actually married. I am through with him for good. I am a very lucky girl that it did not get any further.

"Only last week I was tendered a shower at the home of an aunt of mine. More than 100 of my friends were there. It is too terrible. I want to forget him and forget that this ever happened."

CURLEY CONFERS WITH ICKES

Asks Billion

TO SUBSIDIZE INCREASE IN SALARIES

Washington, Feb. 2—Governor James M. Curley conferred today with PWA Administrator Ickes on three major problems confronting his administration.

The first was his pet—the 160 million public works program for Massachusetts, which runs the gamut from stocking the rivers with fish to building a National Guard camp on Cape Cod.

The second was a recommendation which would affect Mr. Curley's constituents only as the country as a whole would be benefited—a billion dollar subsidy to industry for general increase in salaries with a resultant upward lift of the national purchasing power.

Strengthens Party

The third was the matter of personal patronage, and the strengthening of party lines in the Commonwealth.

Word was received in Boston from Washington that Curley was slated for a dinner conference with Postmaster General James A. Farley and Democratic National Committee Chairman Edward J. Flynn, it is expected that Farley's term is to expire at that time.

Governor Curley is located turning the ERA in Massachusetts into a PWA project which would make it possible to put men to work in the various states in the key cities.

If the conversion were accepted ERA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch would be replaced by Theodore A. Bingham.

$7500 Job

The new PWA administrator would then receive a salary of $7500 a year, and the other administrators a salary in proportion. The positions would be given out with a view to building up a strong party.

Another plan which Governor Curley advocated in the interview to the accompanying problem involved the establishment of a five day work week for government employes in Massachusetts.

On June 1, he said, he would cut the state employes' week to 38 hours instead of 44, with no resultant reduction in pay. That would pave the way for a reemployment of thousands of workers, he said.

A national revamping of the tariff in key industries, amounting in some instances, to a virtual embargo, was another recommendation on which Governor Curley made Secretary Ickes when he presented his program.

New Prosperity

The new line of life given to industry would be sufficient to create of its own momentum an era of prosperity, Governor Curley declared, he claimed.

The three-way program would mean $15,000,000 additional allotments to Massachusetts. With federal grants for three projects the work and wage complex would get under way almost at once, he said, and there would be no let-up in the drive.

AUSTEN LAKE on Dartmouth's Scenery Leapers

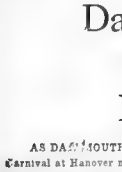
AS DARTMOUTH'S SNOW athletes will do it in their Winter Carnival at Hanover next week, ski jumping is a cross bred sports foal, by well-jumping out of parachute-leaping, to be shunned by persons with skippy hearts, porous ears and quivery knees.



Austen Lake

I have stood at the head of Dartmouth's 70-foot ski-chute and sighted over the woodsie valley, far below, where toy hamlets, thread-like roads and postage stamp fields lie like the whittled models of some jack-knife artist.

It induces toe tickles and the sensation of fur growing inside the stomach.

Then as a jumper, hunched over his wooden slivers, shoves off and hems to slither down at rocket speed, your heart gives a bullfrog leap. Far into the empty air he shoots, flapping his arms above the pinpoint faces of the watching crowd.

Sometimes he lands like a baby's kiss. And sometimes he tangles like a forkful of macaroni, to go splashing down the slope lump as a ragdoll that has spilled its sawdust filling.

* * *

Marsens' Prize Leap

AS ONE GATHERS YEARS, either he grows more brains or loses his nerve. So, I have marvelled at the cold courage required by these college kids who go hurtling into the sky with nothing but a pair of barrel staves lashed to their feet.

Dartmouth men still talk of Tiny Marsens, the 269-pound football guard who came up from Cuba and, before entering at Hanover, never saw ice, except the sort that came in cubes for cafe glasses.

One winter day Tiny accepted a dare to make the varsity ski-jump, although up to the moment of mounting the scaffold he had never ridden the wooden runners.

It is tradition that Tiny's enormous body came whizzing down the incline, like an armour piercing shell, and went sprawling into the void, one ski wound over his shoulder and the other flapping up his spine.

When he landed, my dears, he plowed a groove in the mountain side that went clear down to brown mother earth, leaving shreds of his pants and skin clinging to the moss and lichen.

But he rose under his own power and staggered off to collect his bet, which was a chocolate egg and milk, or "long lead" as they say up there.

Shires' Sad Saga

THERE IS SOMETHING PATHETIC in the final washup of Art Shires, the athletic cuckoo who was knocked limp by a third rate pug in a Dallas preliminary fight.

This is journey's end for the farm boy who tried to paint his mediocre talents over with giddy color and sell himself to sport as a ringtailed monkey.

Now at 27, after a few short years of twisting the world's tail, he is shunned by all the muddle puddle clubs of the country as a bad baseball risk and forced into beer-hall boxing for a livelihood.

Shires in the normal walk of life might have made an earnest, industrious truckman or a competent cow-hand. But he found quick money in baseball too early, suffered illusions of grandeur and went on a wild publicity prowl.

I blame the sport authors for some of this, because the boys seized on his nonsense with eager, hungry howls, and whipped him into still daffier spasms.

He came to take his foolishness as a God-given gift, and became quite serious about it, so that when with the Braves, he would hold solemn seances in hotel lobbies, leaning on his yellow cane, cream-colored spats crossed under his candy-striped suiting. And he would boom so that the whole neighborhood might hear.

He served one useful purpose, to demonstrate that color with out ability in sport is worth no more than the drugstore brands. Now, with his thin, tinsel plating worn off, Shires stands as a sad, forlorn example of wrecked hopes, left to his might-have-been dreams.

* * *

Tinker's Damn

I DISAGREE WITH JOE TINKER, of the Chicago oil double-play trinity, when he says that baseball is hell-bound.

Best answer to this remark is one that Judge Landis made to a baseball reporter who was writing a serial entitled "What Is Wrong With Baseball?"

"If you will tell me what is wrong with the banking business, the textile factories, and the railroads, I will tell you what is wrong with baseball," replied the Judge.

Major league baseball, long before the world's money ache happened, realized that its gravest menace came from fading boy interest and the possible drying up of future playing material at the source.

This, incidentally, is just what ails boxing, where the hole in-the-wall gymnasium and tumble down fight clubs, which were primary schools for young boxers, have folded up. A scarcity of good fighters accounts for the public's lagging interest.

So, organized baseball set aside large sums for spreading the game's gospel among kids, fostering hundreds of amateur leagues, sending their stars and umpires on winter lecture tours and helping the lower minor leagues.

Helping Hand for Andy

COLLEGE FOOTBALL OFFICIALS are grateful in the prospect of few rule changes when the Intercollegiate Rules Board sits down next week.

For years the horn tooters have been nibbling the nipple of their squawkers in a miasma of uncertainty, as the rules shifted like a restless sea.

The outlook is for a few simple refinements, such as making a forward pass from a point beyond scrimmage dead at the passing spot, instead of carrying it back to the original starting point.

This is indicated. Yet such a change would be pudding in Andy Kerr's pantry, and help rather than hinder Colgate's exploiter of the lateral pass.

As Kerr's teams use down-the-field laterals, his only worry has been that one of them would accidentally turn into a forward and thus nullify the entire yardage gained.

Many coaches hollered for a curb on Kerr last fall, yet some of these are most active in clipping the present forward pass penalty's wings.

Victim of Flying Puck

BOB CAMPBELL, BERT KENTY, JIM DOLAN, CLARENCE MUSE

Clarence Muse of the Medford High sextet had a lapse of memory for just one second and was hit on the head by a puck in the Medford-Arlington game at the Arena tonight. Clarence was carried off the ice by his teammates. Though the injury was painful, it was not serious.

MILE TOPS N. Y. RACING MEET

CUNNINGHAM, BONTHRON DUEL

Rindge Tech's sextet furnished one of the biggest upsets of the Greater Boston Hockey league this afternoon when they outskated the league leading Arlington six to the tune of 2 to 1 in the opening game at the Boston Arena.

The game was marred by a bad injury to Buck Kramer, Rindge's stellar goalie, who had his ear slashed by an opponent's skate in a mix-up at the Rindge goal and was removed to Dr. Crowley's office in the Arena offices.

John Muse, star Medford right winger, also received a severe gash on the head when he was hit by a flying puck in the other game that was captured by the Cantabs by the margin of 4 to 1.

The Rindge game was featured by hard checking and many penalties were handed out.

Fans Aroused

Arlington broke the ice first in hanging the puck in the Rindge draperies when Preston received a pass from Chipman and whipped the rubber at Kramer from a difficult angle. The puck was slightly deflected and dropped between Kramer and the goalposts.

An argument resulted when it was declared no goal, causing a near riot by the Arlington rooters, who felt that a score had been made. A few minutes later the same play resulted in a goal for Arlington to the satisfaction of the Arlington fans.

Rindge came back in the second period and out-skated Arlington all the way to tie the score on a pass from Desrosiers to Mahoney, who dented the nets while skating full tilt on Goalie Coyne.

The same combination with Desrosiers on the shooting end won the game for Rindge in the final period while keeping the Arlington forwards completely in check.

Cambridge Latin had things very much its own way in downing Medford, 4 to 1, by scoring in every period.

Medford took the offense at the start and registered the first goal when Muse took a short pass from Campbell at the lip of the goal, and beat the Cantab goalie.

The Classical boys came right back and equaled the score, Boudreau skated through the entire Medford team to score at will.

A minute after the start of the second period Chaisson dented the nets for the second goal for the Cantabs. Buckley increased it another point in the same period Boudreau also scored again in the final stanza unassisted for the final score of the game.

Don George Retains His Mat Title

By Jack Conway

Ed Don George retained his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion when he defeated Dick Shikat, one of the last of the "Old Guard," in 1h. 6m. 57s. before 5000 fans at the Garden.

George started Shikat's downfall with a series of flying tackles, and then pinned him with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

The champion was obliged to display all of his ability to conquer Shikat. The latter was in exceptional condition, and displayed an amazing knowledge of wrestling holds.

It was another case where youth was served. George looked better the longer the bout went. He also maintained his speed.

SHIKAT TIRES

Shikat, on the other hand, tired as the bout passed the hour mark. The German realized he was weakening, and tried to win with a series of headlocks.

Before Shikat recovered from the shock of the driving tackles, the champion scored with an inside crotch hold, lifted Dick in the air and crashed him to the canvas for the winning fall.

Dan O'Mahoney, Irish champion, saw the bout from a ringside seat. He was introduced from the ring, and received a larger hand than either George or Shikat.

O'Mahoney has been signed to meet Nick Lutze in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Garden on February 15.

Nick Lutze, colorful Californian, scored a spectacular victory over Sun Jennings in 15m. 55s. He used a reverse back fall to gain the victory.

Leo Numa won from Mike Romano in 14m. 9s. with a top body press.

Bob Russell and Rube Wright battled 15m. to a draw as did Ernie Dusek and Len Macaluso.

George Zaharas and Gino Garibaldi furnished plenty of action in a torrid 15m. tussle.

DOG WOULD HAVE SOLVED PROBLEM

MAGNATES OFFER AID

By JOE CASHMAN

Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, today voiced his confidence that the pressing problems confronting the Tribe would be straightened out and the National League in Tuesday's convention at New York would find that the local situation was well in hand.

Fuchs went on to state to the Boston newspapermen whom he called for a conference that he wants to continue with the Braves as long as he lives and is doing everything in his power to prevent outside interests from stepping in and taking over the present management of the club.

The Braves' president was frank and outspoken in answer to the many questions presented him.

He explained away the recent controversy over dog racing at Braves Field by stating that the Braves were hard pressed for immediate cash and the rental from the dog promoters looked to be a life saver.

"In the period from 1929-1933 inclusive," stated the judge, "the Braves made considerable money. But it was all spent on new talent, most of which proved worthless.

Hit Hard in '34

"The result was that in 1934, when we had no reserve fund and a particularly poor season, along with an especially bad September in which the Braves played only 21 games, and had only seven or eight days of sunshine, we found ourselves desperately in the hole.

"Therefore, when the dog proposition came up, it looked like manna from the heavens.

"Their rental would take care of our own rental, the taxes and overhead. I never realized that there might be anything wrong about it.

"But when Judge Landis informed me that he wouldn't stand for dog racing at Braves Field either during or after the playing season, I gave up the idea, realizing that I was in the wrong.

Charles F. Adams who was slated to appear along with Fuchs at the conference was sick at home in bed. He commissioned Fuchs to speak on his behalf to the newspapermen.

Fuchs told Pom he went to the New York meeting two weeks ago with deep on his mind, only to find that the moguls there investigated into the financial condition of the Braves, suggesting outside capital be brought in.

Fuchs Approved

The Braves' president was opposed, he said, being desirous of keeping the present management.

He asked them for time to devise a scheme whereby he could continue to carry on himself. After much argument, the league heads agreed to let him carry on.

On his return to Boston, he states, he hit on the plan of selling the block of tickets which has been in effect for two days now. Sales have already hit the $30,000 mark, he reported, an amount far in excess of his expectations, and seem in fair way to go far over the required $75,000.

"Therefore," continues Fuchs, "I a mreonfident that I will be able to convince the league heads next Tuesday that we are sailing along all right and that the present management will be able to straighten out its problems."

Fuchs also intimated that three or four owners of other clubs, while not going on record to that effect, suggested that they might be willin to sell him players from their clubs, whom they might dispose of without severe loss to themselves. And they promised that the price of such players would be fair and they would not press for payment.

There's a double award in store for the Bruins tonight in the event they beat Tommy Gorman's belligerent crew—first place in the American Division and an even break with the Maroons for the season . . . Jimmy Ward, who was injured here about 10 days ago, will not play tonight.

Manager Walter Brown has a powerful Olympic club squad in Lewiston. Mr. Brown and Eddie Jeremiah will referee the game . . . Just for the fact that the Cubs are tipping to New Haven tomorrow Jean Batiste Pusie would accompany the Olympics to Lewiston as a spectator. Even in that role he would win the Pine Tree State fans . . . The presence of a corps of Boston hockey scribes will not deter the Maroons from giving the Bruins the "business" tonight if they decide upon that style of attack.

Joe Stubbs

Before meeting Dartmouth next week in Hanover, Harvard has scheduled a game with Brae Burn training season for Wednesday . . . Due to the break in the cause of the mid-year exams, the crimson squad needs plenty of skating and Coach Joe Stubbs does not believe he will get his charges back in top form for another two weeks . . . Bob Davidson, who is back with Toronto Maple Leafs, was uncovered by Frank Selke while playing with the North Broadway Midgets . . .

Upon returning from the 1929 Olympics, Hooley Smith asked Charlie Querrie, then managing the St. Pats of Toronto, for $5000 per season . . . "Monkey Wrench" Charlie turned him down . . . Hooley signed with Ottawa and a few years later was sold to Montreal for $22500 . . . No wonder Charlie is back punching keys for a living.

Connie Smythe and Frank Selke of Maple Leafs recently returned from a flying trip to Lexington, Ky. . . . No, not hockey players, it was horses they were looking over . . . St. Louis will try out Sunday hockey tomorrow, with Les Canadiens as the attraction.

Revere Bouts

The Garfield A. A.'s amateur boxing show was staged before a crowd that filled the Washington Arena. The summary of the final bouts:

125-Pound Class—Barney Petrosky, Boston, beat Robert Allen, Lynn, decision.

147-Pound Class—Frank Walsh, South Boston, beat Charles Sodano, Fitchburg, decision.

Heavyweight Class—Tony Wrudinski, Charlestown, beat Emery Henry, Lynn, decision.

Jockey Through

Santa Anita Track, Arcadia, Cal., Feb. 2 (INS)—Lee Humphries, one of the best known jockeys in the business today, has said good-by to saddle and silks. The ace rider, succumbed to the bugaboo of all riders of the turf, rapid growth and inability to keep down his weight, so today he was heading for his home in Jerome, Ida.

DIZZY CLAIMS GIANTS ALL THROUGH

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 2—The effervescent Jerome Herman Dean is in our midst, the first of the celebrities to arrive for the baseball writers' dinner tomorrow night, and, as usual, he is talking the language of "Dizzy" Dean.

Which means that nobody has yet fitted a tag, except his own, to "Dizzy's" tongue. He still talks about Jerome Herman, and how he's going to pitch the Cardinals to another pennant.

"There a gonna be nothing to it," he asserted this morning, when interviewed over a breakfast cup of coffee in his hotel suite. "Dizzy" and his kid brother are going to win forty-five games again. With that many in the bank, the Cards will breeze home.

"The Giants," he answered the query, "are through. We caught 'em last September, and they'll stay caught.

Mr. Boston Brouillard In 3 More Coast Bouts

By Jack Conway

LOU BROUILLARD will sign for three more bouts on the Coast as part of his plan to fight his way back to the world's middleweight championship.

Brouillard knocked out Oscar Rankin in four rounds in Los Angeles last Tuesday night and has become a sensation in California. Rankin had beaten the best middleweights on the Coast and was mentally on his way to a title bout when Brouillard tipped him over.

Mr. Boston

Brouillard knocked out Sammy Swanger in four heats in his previous start, which was in Pittsburgh on Christmas Day.

Brouillard is only 23 years of age. He has the distinction of having won and lost the world welterweight and middleweight championships.

Since going under the management of Johnny Buckley, Brouillard has displayed first class fighting ability. He has also proved he can easily make 160 pounds. He was under this notch for his contests with Slaughter and Rankin.

Before leaving for the Coast the Worcester warrior told me he had had 204 bouts as amateur and professional. He thrives on fighting.

Lou's Philadelphia bout with Paul Pirrone and his Pittsburgh match with Frank Battaglia will be postponed until he fulfills his Coast engagements.

* * *

TEDDY YAROSZ

ANY FIRST class fighter will be able to defeat Teddy Yarosz, current middleweight champion. Yarosz is a poor imitation of a title holder. He was recently chilled by "Baby" Risko.

The latter then lost to Vince Dundee in New York after the officials had made a couple of different decisions.

Yarosz is merely a rugged youth with a fair punch. He lacks boxing class, and is easy to hit. This was proved quite conclusively when Risko tossed his knockout punch from the floor.

Brouillard would be a cinch to lick Yarosz. The title has been of little value to Yarosz as he was hurt in the Risko bout and has been unable to box since. His defeat by Risko will injure his drawing powers.

* * *

CARNERA'S DRIVE

PRIMO Carnera, broadcasting from Miami, Fla., upon his return from South America, has opened fire on Max Baer. He wants to battle Baer in a return bout.

Baer prefers Carnera as an opponent for a title contest. He believes Primo still has a great deal of box office appeal.

Carnera would have made a better showing against Baer in their last bout if he had not been deprived of the services of Billy Duffy, his American manager.

Duffy is one of the best seconds in the boxing game, and he would have handled Primo better than Louis Soresci.

Baer will always be able to lick Carnera. He can whip Steve Hamas, Max Schmeling, or any of the other contenders.

BASKETBALL

AMATEUR basketball in this city will reach a new high tonight when the Boston Y. M. H. A. team meets the West End House five at the Boston Y. M. H. A. court on Seaver street. Both clubs are in fine condition for the game, and the capacity crowd is certain to witness a brilliant contest.

Sam Smith, physical director at the Boston Y. M. H. A., will have charge of tonight's game.

RANDOM SHOTS

DAN O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, will clash with Bob Russell in a finish bout at the Auditorium in Providence next Tuesday night . . . He will have Billy Bartush as an opponent at Rochester, N. Y., the following night . . . Jack Curley will feature the Irish champion in the New York Garden show on February 18 against an opponent to be named within a week.

Andy Callahan post cards from Los Angeles it is "Juna in January" on the Coast . . . He will remain there until spring . . . The New York Garden received another body blow when Art Lasky was taken ill on the day of his 15 round bout with Jimmy Braddock . . . Boxing has received one shock after another in New York . . . The Bob Olin-John Henry Lewis bout was recently called off at the 11th hour on the ground Olin had an infected tooth . . . It was later stated that there was illness in Olin's immediate family and that this was the reason he withdrew from the contest.

Nate Lewis is going ahead with plans for a ten-round bout between Joe Louis of Detroit and King Levinsky . . . None of the first flight of heavyweights will have any part of Louis since he has played such terrific punching power . . . Jack Curley is trying to sign a Jim Londos-Ed Don George bout for New York . . . These big fellows battled for more than three hours to a draw at Fenway Park last summer.

BONTHRON CUNNINGHAM MEET TONIGHT

EXPERTS PICK KANSAS STAR

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 2—Featuring the sixth footracing duel between Bill Bonthron and Glenn Cunningham, the 28th annual Millrose A. A. games will be held in Madison Square Garden tonight before a capacity house of more than 15,000.

Star-studded fields [illegible] events, most [illegible] championships—National A. A. U., National Collegiate, or Intercollegiate A. A. A.—[illegible] individual events, but the real crowd drawing magnet [illegible] Wanganker mile.

Facing the starter for the classic race at 10 p. m. will be Cunningham, Bonthron, Eric Ny of Sweden, Gene Venzke of Penn and Bill Ray of Manhattan. On the theory that anything can happen [illegible] Ny, Venzke or even Ray [illegible] why might lead home the field, but it will be terrific [illegible] to the talent of the race does not end in another of those pulsating finishes between Cunningham and Bonthron.

Billy Has Edge

Cunningham, holder of both the world's indoor and outdoor records, ruled a slight favorite over Bonthron mainly because he already has run three competitive races, Bonthron, on the other hand, has shown amazing speed in training here and apparently has reached the peak of condition.

Although Bonthron holds a 3-2 edge over Cunningham in their five previous meetings, the two milers split even in their two indoor clashes last year. Bonthron whipped the Kansan by inches in the Baxter mile of the New York A. C. games, but Cunningham reversed the decision by an [illegible] margin in the National A. A. U. 1500 meters championship.

In view of the [illegible] the board season is just [illegible] under way, few expect Cunningham a world beating performance [illegible] to be approached, but there [illegible] telling what may happen [illegible] Ny, Venzke or Ray [illegible] to a fast early pace.

GIANTS, CARDS DUELISTS FOR FLAG

By Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 2—"Rabbit" Maranville, dynamic little second baseman of the Boston Braves, wants the world to know he is fit and ready to take over his old post when the 1935 season swings into action.

"The old pins are in swell shape," he said as he scoffed at reports that a fractured leg received during the training season last year had not mended properly. "I'll be back at my old second base job again this season. You can bet on that!"

"The leg's as good as ever," he continued, thrusting out the once-broken limb with little regard for nearby furniture. "I'll be in there when the first ball is pitched ready to take my cut," he vowed.

Opposed to Pari-Mutuel Betting in Golf Tickets

By Associated Press

Glendale, Calif., Feb. 2—Gene Sarazen says he is going home to his farm in Connecticut, to his pigs, his cows and his dogs, when the current Oakmont tournament ends. The former American and British open champion and P. G. A. title holder is a bit tired of golf after traveling a quarter of a million miles in the last year.

[illegible] I like Caliente. I like the course and the people there," he said, "but I don't like the idea of pari-mutuel betting on golf. It's all right for horse races, but all wrong, I think, for golf.

"It would never do for golf to [illegible] the basis for pari-mutuel betting on a big scale, he continued. "You remember when the gambler tried to muscle in at Fresh Meadow in 1932. I'll never forget playing that tournament between two big policemen.

"Another thing about betting in a big way on golf. It's a game and it must continue to be a game for sportsmen to play and watch. You know and I know that nobody playing in that tournament would make a single move, that was not absolutely on the up and up, but there are always suspicious people to throw some dirt. Wasn't it Caesar's wife who had to be above suspicion. So must golf."

"No, sir, it's not for me," declared the golfer. "I'm going to Connecticut and instead of watching the grass on these beautiful greens cut here, I'll spend the next few weeks, before I start getting ready for England, watching the alfalfa in my hay field. At least I hope there will be alfalfa there before I leave."

SPORTS SHOW DRAWS CROWDS

GREAT Outdoors EVENT

SHOWS LURE OF VIRILE SPORTS

With its great area of walls and floor space transformed into a great out of doors atmosphere, Mechanics Building today welcomed the thousands who attended the opening of the New England Sportsmen's and Motor Boat Show. Never before has such an auspicious opening been held for the show this year is by all odds the largest and most comprehensive ever attempted. With every available inch of space occupied, with the largest indoor tank in the world for aquatic sports with the forest of the North brought within doors, the show, staged by the Campbell-Fair-banks Expositions, excels anything of the kind in the entire world.

There are animals from every section of the globe, ranging from the huge and fast disappearing moose to the smallest of fish and reptiles. Incidentally, there is on exhibition the only entire family of moose ever brought successfully into captivity. There is also an entire family of puma or mountain lions, while from Florida comes the greatest collection of reptiles and snakes ever gathered under one roof.

In the Grand Hall of Mechanics Building has been built the largest indoor tank in the world and within this expert guides will compete in thrilling contests which embrace log rolling, canoe rescues, canoe races canoe tilting and various other sports. Keen eyed marksmen will enter the competition for archery experts

Doors will open daily at 10 a. m except on Sunday when the doors open at 2 p. m., and each day they will be open until 10:30 at night

Vermont, A Sportsmans' Paradise

The theme of the State of Vermont exhibit at the show is "A State That Is Unspoiled" and for sportsmen especially those who like such gamey fish as landlocked salmon and trout in a rugged state is indeed a paradise. The streams and lakes of Vermont are clear and cold which insures action when you get a strike.

Many interesting things are shown at the exhibit included mountings of fish and game and maps showing the concentration of game and alluring photos of scenes in various parts of the state. Visitors are urged to see the showing of the state which was the birthplace of Calvin Coolidge

ASSOCIATION Aids Sheep Growers

The Maine Sheep and Wool Association was organized in 1920 for the purpose of assisting farmers in marketing their wool and providing wool in grades of the finest quality for all consumers. The Association consists of between 700 and 800 wool producers who ship increasing number each year. All wool is carefully handled and graded according to the requirements in the various fabrics

The net proceeds resulting from the sale of both wool and mohair found goods reflects in an increased price to the farmers which constitutes a greater interest in raising both the number and quality of sheep kept on the farm

HIS SPINNER Catches Big Fish

E. C. Leighton of Charlestown landed the biggest lake trout taken from Moosehead Lake in some 15 years last May with an automatic spinner which he invented.

Up until this year only Leighton and his friends used this spinner but he has now placed it on the market and promises followers of the sport some real catches this season The spinner is shown in space 12-A at the show

SMOKING In Bed

The Turks have given us a remarkable and clean method of smoking through the age-old water bottle pipe A long tube connected to the bottle can be used at short distance from where the bottle is set, giving the smoker comfort and relaxation while not reclining or sitting Guests bother in displaying these pipes at the shop on Massachusetts avenue

SHARES IN Good POSITION TO Rally

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

What of the market after the gold clause decision. That is the question on the lips of all interested market observers as they go home for the week-end.

It is not easily answered. This week has obviously been a waiting period. Quiet trading with a slow reduction in turnover as prices faltered lends substance to ideas that the list is fairly well sold out. As a consequence a favorable decision would find the list in a position to rally smartly. An unfavorable decision, on the other hand, will not find the list vulnerable and a bad reaction does not seem to threaten.

Taking the naturally optimistic view of a favorable decision it is possible to see a rally developing that will carry prices to new highs above December and January tops. Considering the sold-out condition of the market, the wide base that has probably been laid for an upturn, we do not wonder at the ideas of those who plan to sell high-grade bonds and buy stocks. Even though the news he had is decidedly pessimistic a recovery could be staged after an initial downturn. It is not a strange thing for the list to rally after the bad news is out.

* * *

Notebook: Atchison fell out of bed when it touched 44 flat . . . After a fall from 57 without an intervening five point rally the stock looks about right for a technical recovery no matter where it is going eventually . . . Another factor we want to call attention to in the case of carrier shares that have broken downside resistances is the lack of volume . . . In both the case of Atchison and Central the breaking of resistance was a decisive affair . . . Obviously we must be on guard for false moves.

* * *

The slide of railway share prices, as measured by the averages, is a serious affair. The loss of nearly six points are dire at hand and a break through these by a majority of such stocks would bring the cry that a new bear market has begun. It may be that fear of an adverse decision on gold held them down and then contributed to lightened selling as the Supreme Court heard the case. At the same time the internal problems of the industry are severe and require patience.

* * *

Briefs: In common with many others, we place a great deal of faith in railway earnings and the A hoped-for favorable decision and the weight should be lifted from the section and a good many up above previous highs should result . . . Then the backward members will be forgiven their sins . . . We note that more and more investment trusts are taking on Arour . . . The preferred still appeals to us as a wonderful investment and the common as an excellent speculation for a general business recovery.

ROXY
Special Radio TRIBUTE
HONORS NOTED COMPOSER

By N. F. T.

Observing the 10th anniversary of Victor Herbert's first great success in the world of operetta composition, the popular broadcasting maestro named "Roxy" will devote the major portion of his Saturday night program to paying homage to the celebrated writer. Meaning at 8 o'clock and over WNAC channels.

* * *

It was in 1895 that "The Wizard of the Mill" soared sharply behind footlights, whereupon scene became the rage of that era. Herbert and Roxy were staunch friends and the orchestra overlord recalls the subsequent successful career credited to his friend. Tunes such as "The Red Mill" and "Naughty Marietta" are among the pieces that engage the "Roxy and his Gang" will play for listeners this evening.

BARITONE BEGINS

Richard Bonnelli, leading baritone with the Metropolitan Opera Company, launches a coast to coast soloing series this evening (WNAC) come 9 o'clock. Bonnelli is to fit in with the augmented Andre Kostelanetz orchestral group. In addition to classic selections, he will also contribute the sturdy southern folk song, "Old Man River."

* * *

An impressive recital by Charles Little, well known and blind violinist of Hollywood, will note the Down East four winds (WBZ) this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Handel's famous "Largo" and "Fiddling Fiddle" by Rubinoff are two renditions slated.

PARTY PROGRAM

X-9 members are advised by little Marion Stiles of Watertown, that she is singing her way through a birthday party to be broadcast this afternoon from WBSO of Babson Park, at 3:30 p. m. Marion has been a great artist on two occasions when the weekly X-9 program takes to the waves on Tuesday nights.

Speaking from the Yankee Network studios in Hanover, Prof. Charles Townsend Copeland will be heard over the Columbia Network, which will feature Harvard, WAAB and affiliated stations of the Yankee Network tonight from 10:45 to 11:00 p. m.

Dr. Copeland, who is English Professor Emeritus of Rhetoric and Oratory at Harvard University, will include in his program the reading of Kipling's "Mandalay," and the exceedingly humorous "My Financial Career" by Stephen Leacock.

Have you bright eyes?

Then it ought to be a snap for you to identify the leading Hollywood celebrities as they appear daily in the Boston Evening American, in the fascinating "About Faces" series by Art. Moger. Today's favorite performers appear at the Lynn Paramount theater where Manager J. J. Dempsey has arranged for the showing of "Bright Eyes" and "Bachelor of Arts." All of the above stars appear at the Lynn Paramount theater in the above mentioned pictures.

Use the letters "R" and "U" and fill in the squares beneath, each drawing with the proper identifications. Each square equals a letter in the name of the star depicted. Successful followers of the "About Faces" series share in the weekly $25 in cash awards. Here are the solutions of last week's "About Faces" series:

First prize—$5.00—Abe Rosenoff, 73 Howland street, Roxbury.

Gunman Dies IN CHAIR
MAIS, LEGENZA GO TO DOOM

By Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Feb. 2—Gangland careers of murder, kidnaping and robbery ended today in the electric chair for Robert Mais and Walter Legenza.

Mais, still suffering from six machine gun bullet wounds, went first, at 7:50 a. m. Saturnine, poker-faced Legenza, followed 16 minutes later, at 8.06 a. m.

They were electrocuted for the murder of Ewell M. Huband during a mail truck robbery here last March 9. The notorious tri-state gang which they led, however, had a record of two known murders and several suspected killings.

Mais walked to the chair. Legenza was taken in a wheel chair, because of two broken legs suffered in leaping over an embankment to escape Philadelphia police. A plaster cast was removed from Legenza's right leg to permit affixing of the electrode.

Spiritual ministrations were said by Prison Chaplain R. V. Lancaster and Colonel Fred Seiler of the Salvation Army.

Both gangsters were pale, Legenza naturally so because of his injuries which necessitated blood transfusions.

PAYMENT OF
HARD TO # Block

By CLARENCE FACKLER Ph. D. Assistant Professor of Economics, New York University.

By using their New Deal arguments, congressional leaders are finding it difficult these days to avoid passing out a few more billion dollars in pocket-money to ex-soldiers.

They realize that a goodly number of war veterans, like many other citizens, are both needy and underprivileged. Besides, the greenadiers have no intention of hoarding their winnings, and so the government can rely upon them to cooperate in its "spend-for-recovery" program, however asinine it may be.

At the same time, however, there is no desire to permit the Treasury to degenerate conspicuously into a free-for-all grab-bag.

In the last decade the "new-era" politicians were not so hard put to reconcile their policies for everlasting prosperity with the pleas of veterans for a cash bonus. They stressed economy, had not promised to remember "forgotten men" and were committed to no liberal policy of relief.

Thus it was comparatively easy in 1924 to persuade the veterans to accept free 20-year endowment policies in lieu of a $1,400,000,000 cash bonus. To do this required a sum of $1,750,000,000, which in 20 years with interest at 4 per cent would amount to $3,500,000,000.

The object was to provide the veterans and their dependents with some sort of security in 1945. But owing to the severity of the depression, veterans were permitted in 1931 to borrow their security. Few, if any, expected to return the money which they received.

To date, over 86 per cent of the war veterans have borrowed something like $1,690,000,000 on their service certificates, the present value of which is $2,100,000,000. And, the greater part of $220,000,000 in accrued interest has not been paid by the veterans, but has been charged against their "endowment policies."

If, therefore, this interest and the borrowings are deducted, the present value of the Government's obligation (due in 1945) does not exceed $190,000,000. Briefly, the game now is to alter the terms of the 1924 agreement to the tune of an immediate cash payment of $2,240,000,000. Like the proverbial camel, the nose has crept under the tent, and from the proverbial bush.

Nevertheless, neither the bonus-seekers or the administration can muster any substantial reasons for such largesse. To begin with, war veterans are in receipt of benefits of financially than the taxpayers who must hand bonus checks to them. And even if they are such, veterans have access to relief, and in some cases are given preference.

So, not only do the privileged and the needy arguments fall flat, but a two-billion-dollar cash present from the taxpayers would simply have less to spend by the amount of the taxes. Even if the Government borrowed or printed $2,000,000,000, everybody except the veterans would soon discover that some of their purchasing power had vanished. Viewed from any angle, then, to pay the bonus is simply to take from "Peter to pay Paul."

of Labor FEARED
30-HOUR-WEEK DRIVE PUSHED

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 2—President Roosevelt's New Deal advisers have been confidently predicting the long-awaited upswing in business would come in the spring.

All signs and portents were favorable to that until today.

It now appears there is more than an even chance that spring recovery will be marked by labor disturbances of marked intensity in three major industries—automobile, textile, and steel.

Organized labor, through the American Federation of Labor, has repudiated the renewed automobile code, extended by President Roosevelt until June, and repudiated the NRA along with it.

The textile unions feel the same way about their situation.

There is unrest and dissatisfaction in labor's ranks in the big steel industry.

Organized labor leaders assert there is going to be a showdown. Harassed administration leaders fear they are right.

The pressure upon the leaders of labor is coming up from the ranks, where it is asserted the NRA has failed to confer benefits promised.

A contributing factor is the failure of A. F. of L. organizers to make much headway in organizing the workers in the steel and automotive industries.

The leaders attribute this failure to the unwillingness of NRA to step down the line" for them under section 7-A, the collective bargaining clause of the recovery act.

Ordinarily conservative William Green, president of the A. F. of L., is on the war-path. Organized labor, he said, wants no more of the NRA. It is going to put its faith in the 30-hour week bill now pending in both Senate and House, and to which the administration is strongly opposed.

RITES GIVEN
R. W. CHILD

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 2—A solemn requiem high mass was sung today for Richard Washburn Child, diplomat and author, in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Vincent's Ferrer.

The Very Reverend William Marchont officiated and the honorary pall bearers were: James L. Ashley; Bainbridge colby, former Secretary of State; Arthur A. Ballantine; Franklin Mott Guenther and Henry P. Fletcher.

Child's widow, Mrs. Dorothy Child, was accompanied to the church by George F. Handel, Child's law partner, and Child's daughters by a previous marriage, Miss Ann and Miss Constance Child.

Child, former ambassador to Italy, who had written extensively for the Hearst publications, died Thursday from pneumonia.

He was baptized a Catholic a day before his death and his funeral service from the church he had attended for the past three years, although not a member of that faith.

2 MORE YEARS For Hitlerism

New York, Feb. 2 (AP)—Hitler will probably last "another year or two," Prince Hubertus Friedrich Lowenstein predicted today, after which he, Prince Lowenstein, will be quite willing to take over his job.

Arriving for a lecture tour, the prince, former leader of the Catholic Centrist Party in Berlin, declared:

The fall of Hitler will undoubtedly be brought about by economic crises. But I believe he will last another year or two. We hope he will because we are not ready yet."

HOPE FOR END OF UNREST

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Wall Street is praying for the Supreme Court gold decision on Monday if for no other reason than to end the uncertainty.

Few are willing to venture any guess what the markets will do, with the sneaking suspicion around that perhaps nothing much will happen either way. It's beginning to look anyway as though a decline won't be permitted by the expedience of closing the exchange.

Technicians for some days have been saying stocks are oversold.

And it hasn't made any difference, nor has it kept some like Atchison from going to new lows.

Selling in the rails is coming from people who have carried them a long time and are getting worn out . . . Except for a few of the Eastern carriers, particularly the coal roads, January rail earnings will be quite sour despite drastic economies put into effect in December . . . Retrenchment in some cases ran as much as 20 per cent.

Looks as though a little "hot oil" was flowing around the country.

Suggested by the cuts in gasoline prices in Chicago and Houston . . . makes like the oils for some reason even though it is the rare speculator who has ever been able to beat them market-wise . . .

General Refractories' current orders are reported around double those of a year ago this time . . . The boys downtown are wondering what has happened to the increase in the prices which was slated for the first of February.

FUNERAL
TOMORROW

All New England will be represented among those who pay tribute to the late Theophilus King, philanthropist, banker and foremost citizen of Quincy, at his funeral tomorrow.

Services will be conducted at his late home, 270 Adams street, at 2:30 p. m.

Mr. King contributed lavishly to various charities. The King Family Fund today amounts to more than $1,000,000.

In recent years the late banker celebrated his birthday by directing the giving of golden loaves of this fund among 41 Quincy churches and other charitable institutions. He was greatly interested in the Park Street Church in Boston.

CONTEST
STEPS UP FUND

To inject a new stimulus into the contributions to the Emergency Campaign for 1935, which has already taken in $1,700,851.72, a "Cinderella Contest" will be held.

Each new woman contributor will be given a golden slipper, and asked to fry it on. The woman, over 18 years of age, whose foot most perfectly fits the slipper, and the contour of whose foot is adjudged the most perfect, will win the prize.

The winning award is a trip to New York and Washington, with a chaperone of the winner's own choosing, all expenses to be paid for both, and an outfit of clothes. The outfit will include a pair of golden ball room slippers, silk hose, a traveling dress, afternoon gown, evening gown, pocketbook, traveling bag and the other accessories.

Eleven secondary prizes will also be given.

ANCIENT DOLLAR A Fortune to Him

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 2 (AP)—P. I. Newman, unemployed for the last four years, found an 1804 dollar among his change and asked a bank if there was much in it.

Pointing out that it was badly worn, the teller offered him "a good dollar" for it.

Then Newman took his dollar to the Federal Reserve Bank where, he said, they told him it was worth $2500.

CALVIN COOLIDGE,

NORTHAMPTON, May 1, 1931 — With the convocation of representatives of various lines of industry have come proposals for controlling and standardizing business.

Almost all these suggestions are for ARTIFICIAL RULES of conduct to save a situation from the inevitable consequences of THE FORCE OF NATURAL LAWS.

PROSPERITY PRESIDENT, GREAT AMERICAN, WROTE:

If business is to be controlled from the outside the liberty of action and power of initiative will be greatly circumscribed.

If standardization is adopted in its entirety the result is RIGID FOSSILIZATION WHICH PREVENTS PROGRESS.

Neither the State nor the Federal Governments can supply the information and wisdom necessary to direct the business activity of the nation.

About all that can wisely be done in this direction is provided by trade organizations.

Additions to the system promise most if they are VOLUNTARY and provide a better co-ordination of activities.

One of the fundamental needs is sound banking. Our financial power continually needs diversion from wrong channels and direction to right channels.

The experience, skill and wisdom necessary to guide business CANNOT BE ELECTED OR APPOINTED. It has to GROW UP NATURALLY from the people. The process is long and fraught with human sacrifice, but it is the only one that can work. Edison and Ford are not Government creations.

Our Textiles Suffer by Competition With Coolie Labor

SECRETARY HULL'S placid internationalism in the face of a dangerous shrinkage in certain key export items recalls the historic spectacle of Nero fiddling while Rome was warming up.

Although even in the peak years, 1927-1929, exports amounted to only 6 per cent of the national income, shipments abroad were of crucial importance for American products, notably cotton.

MORE THAN HALF the American crop of raw cotton was normally exported.

Almost under our very eyes in recent months established American export markets for cotton goods have SHRIVELLED UP AND ALL BUT DISAPPEARED.

The improved social standards under the NRA, including higher pay and shorter hours, served to widen the disparity between American costs and foreign costs.

THE raising of American costs of production virtually delivered over our export markets to the Japanese and other competitors.

The seriousness of the change is illustrated by the fact that exports of American cotton cloth have declined from 564,000,000 square yards in 1929 to an estimated 225,000,000 square yards in 1934, and exports of cotton yarn and thread have dwindled from 28,000,000 pounds to less than 8,000,000 pounds.

Employers of coolie labor have even recently invaded our natural markets, such as the Philippines, Cuba, Haiti and the Central and South American republics.

American manufacturers, complying with the cost raising humane standards which have been adopted in this country, expect counter-balances to protect them from competitors who still employ coolie labor.

IN Japan, for example, more than 80 per cent of the employes in the textile industry are women; more than 20 per cent of these employes are under 16 years of age, and it is understood that many of these young girls are indentured to the industry for a term of six years virtually on a subsistence basis.

Against such competition, based on low living standards, the American cotton textile export industry faces COMPLETE DESTRUCTION.

Our problem is to DIMINISH total unemployment rather than AUGMENT it and since the Government has been chiefly responsible for destroying the cotton industry, we urge some intelligent suggestion on the part of the brain stormers at Washington towards restoring it.

WASHINGTON should at least give encouragement to the Philippine Legislature when during this year it again considers legislation to protect American cotton in the Island trade.

Likewise, in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements with our Caribbean, Central and South American neighbors, the State Department should take into consideration the interests of the American cotton textile exporting trade.

The statistics of the disappearing cotton textile export trade constitutes one of the tragedies of our international commerce.

It is regrettable that we lack at the head of the State Department a man who has a grasp of the meaning of these tangible movements.

Under Mr. Hull, a visionary who romantically thinks in the theoretical terms of mid-Victorian economics, there is a tendency to move up in the clouds, while the more realistic Japanese and others snatch away our markets.

This Will Save Lives

"Lost Off the Georges"

On many a humble New England gravestone is the simple epitaph:

"Lost off the Georges."

The line is a reminder of the days when thousands of our seamen fished the Georges Banks. Many are the tales of their heroism.

And many of their descendants—and others—seek the cod and his cousins in those dangerous waters today.

The New England division of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey has recently completed a new map of the Georges.

It shows submarine valleys and chasms not heretofore known to exist.

The survey is commendable as true lifesaving work.

Sun and Shadow

Watch the Eclipse

At 10:36 a. m. tomorrow a shadow will begin to creep across the face of the sun.

It will be the first solar eclipse visible here since August, 1932, when the stores reaped a harvest by the sale of smoked glasses.

And the "big show" in the heavens brought even traffic to a standstill as curious motorists stopped to watch the spectacle.

Have your children watch the eclipse. Tell them about the old days when all mankind would have viewed it with fear and trembling.

It will help to teach them how we have progressed from the depths of ignorance and superstition.

'Try and Do It!'

"STEP on the gas!" says the Government.
(The gas that's taxed at sixty per cent.)
"Step on the gas—full speed ahead!"
(With a load of codes that's heavy as lead.)
"Step on the gas, with a surge of power!"
(But don't go over ten miles per hour.)
"Get Business started, let traffic flow!"
(There's a team of oxen ahead—go slow.)

"STEP on the gas!" says the Government.
(But do not pass any precedent).
"The highway's open and plain and sure."
(Except for numerous signs, "Detour!")
"Step on the gas, with a lot of heft!
Keep to the Right." (Or it may be Left,
Depending wholly on rules designed
To fit officialdom's state of mind.)

"STEP on the gas, all you business strivers!"
(Though the tonneau's crowded with backseat drivers).
"Step on the gas!" (Though you've got a horde
Of "experts" riding the running-board,
And there's a trailer that's loaded full
Of more "advisers" you'll have to pull.
Behind each bush is a motor cop,
At every crossroad our signs say "Stop!"
But, though you're hampered to some extent—)
"Step on the gas!" says the Government!
—Berton Braley.

Flattery With Motive

By Winifred Black

The newspaper woman turned her head slightly and spoke in a low, muffled voice that sounded like the voice of a prisoner talking over his shoulder to another of his same kind.

Winifred Black

"Which is he?" said the newspaper woman, "An outer or an inner?"

And the man who was advancing with such a great show of eager interest soon proved which he was.

He was an "inner."

He devoted his evening to the newspaper woman.

He declared that he admired "women of the world" like the newspaper woman.

Also he loved the color of her hair, sort of reddish and sort of golden.

But, of course, any hair would go well with those deep, brilliant, ash-green eyes, pardon him for being so personal, but, of course, she would understand. He was speaking not as the man, but as an appreciative artist.

Oh yes, he was an artist, he did portraits, don't you know? And, just by the way, he was giving an exhibition next week. When he said that the secret was out!

He was an inner, the newspaper woman said.

Well, he was better than an outer.

"When anyone suddenly begins to make a great time over me," said the newspaper woman, "I know he is either an inner or an outer.

"He either wants to get something in or to keep something out of the paper.

"The inner is bad enough, but he's kind of legitimate in a way.

"The outer is a bit of a plotter. He wants to keep someone's marriage or divorce or some big business enterprise out of the newspaper.

"Now, these outers would be amazed if you asked them to give you a room or a desk in one of the offices, just for old time's sake, or something. But that's what they're doing when they try to keep news out of the paper.

"They don't mean it that way, but that's what it is."

And suddenly a long vista of inquiring friends rolls before me like a dream—inners and outers, one after the other.

Strange beings who can never quite realize that making a newspaper is a business, and not just a matter of idle amusement, or the gratification of a peculiar taste.

Stars and Stripes

Europe is bitterly disappointed because we refused to join her league court. When we see Europe crying over us we just have to laugh.

Europe seems to believe that "to the debtors belong the spoils."

Bainbridge Colby says of our Constitution: "It is the most American thing about America." It's 100 per cent constitutional.

The U. S. Senators who put George Washington back in circulation saved the country from going to the European dogs of war.

It's about time for Colonel Rupert and Babe Ruth to start their spring training. This year's is likely to be the battle of many "centuries."

WRITES ABOUT

Another Forecast

Having told you what I expect to happen during the next twelve months, I will go one step further and do a little prophesying about the next hundred years.

As a rule these stories about the future deal heavily in scientific predictions. But I know nothing about science.

Personally, I think that most of our technical skill will be used to consolidate the gains made during the last hundred years.

That is to say, the aeroplanes of 2035 will greatly resemble those of the year 1935, but they will be much larger and absolutely safe and foolproof.

All long distance traveling will be done by air, and the big ocean liners will have disappeared from the face of the ocean. Freight will continue to be carried in vessels, but a passenger, a hundred years hence, will no more consider traveling by boat or train than I would think of going from Riverside to New York by stage-coach.

* * *

Within the realm of medicine the surgeon will no longer play the important role he does today.

His clinical brethren shall at last have caught up with him and they shall have learned how to prevent most of those unfortunate occurrences which today can only be cured by direct interference on the part of the surgeon.

Epidemics shall have become a thing of the past, because there again the doctors shall have learned how to "prevent" in such a thorough fashion that there is no longer any need for a "cure."

* * *

We shall undoubtedly have visited the moon, but as that speck of dust is uninhabitable, the interest in that sort of aerial exploration will be entirely academic. Such trips shall at least have told us what the other side of the moon looks like. My own bet is that the other side will be exactly like the side with which we are familiar. And that is not saying much.

* * *

There will be a tremendous change in our ideas about crime, and criminology will have become one of the most important departments of science.

Crime will no longer be considered as a manifestation of personal wickedness, but it will be regarded and treated as a form of disease.

Within that field, too, the scientist will strive after prevention, so that he will not be called upon to effect his costly and dangerous cures.

* * *

The incurable cases will be recognized as such at a very early age and the victims will be segregated and kept apart from the rest of humanity, as we do today with our unfortunate lunatics and lepers and our typhoid-fever carriers.

* * *

As the pace of life shall have been greatly retarded, there will be a great decrease in the number of lunatics.

Life will no longer be so utterly unbearable to vast numbers of people that they are obliged to find relief and escape in getting themselves apart from the rest of humanity by taking flight into lunacy.

* * *

One final word about science. Within another century it will have given man such a complete mastery over nature that man at last will be able to direct his own immediate destiny.

Which will mean the final end of the competitive era of the prehistoric cave-dwellers and the beginning of "homo sapiens."

Human Side of the News

The Common Cold

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

"Every four minutes some one dies in the United States from pneumonia or some other disease traceable to the common cold. Every year an economic loss of at least one billion dollars in wages, lost time and lessened efficiency in the United States is traceable to the common cold."

To these statements, the first by an eminent physician and the second by an equally eminent industrialist, may be added this third: That every day in the autumn and winter five million persons in the United States are heard to exclaim: "Oh, I just got a cold."

Most common of our ailments in fact, more than fifty per cent of the sickness in this country is due to respiratory troubles—this ordinary cold is the most baffling as to its origin.

Thousands of hours of research and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent and continue to be spent in search of the little bug or whatever it may be that sets us to sneezing, coughing, feeling generally miserable and rushing to the rock and rye.

AGREE WITH GRANDMA

It is interesting to record that some of the investigating scientists are getting back to grandma's idea that drafts and chills are the things which give us colds.

Not that they put it that way, but they say, like Doctors Kerr and Lagen of the University of California, that "Dissipation of body heat through the skin pores may of itself produce a common cold in the absence of bacteria."

Basing their opinion on the case of "The Twenty-four Men who Could Not Catch Colds," those two doctors told the American Association for the Advancement of Science that they doubted that the common cold is infectious and that it may not even be of bacterial origin.

The California medical men selected two dozen victims of conunusl colds the sort of fellows who never leave the house without rubbers and half a dozen handkerchiefs.

Six at a time they were put into a special air-conditioned room, kept there for several days and subjected to all the supposedly sure-fire cold exposure. And there wasn't a sneeze in a roomful.

However, the weight of medical opinion is overwhelmingly in accord with the finding at Johns Hopkins, among other places, that colds are due primarily to a virus, invisible even under the microscope, with the physical condition of the person an important factor.

VIEWS AT HARVARD

Recently Harvard scientists said that infective germs, expelled by a person's coughing or sneezing, stay alive for many hours.

It had been supposed that these droplets went immediately to the earth, like everything else under the law of gravity. Instead, they evaporate, leaving the germs behind.

It was another Harvard man, Dr. William C. Sadlin, who spent a year at Spitzbergen in the Arctic and another year in the Virgin Islands in the tropics to find out that the natives never have colds until tourists come along with them from the temperate zone.

Wherefore, states the professor, colds come, not from drafts, but from another person.

So it goes, and, as one report has it:

"We now know that many things that were supposed to cure colds do not cure them. Much progress has been made. Much more remains to be made before we will be in a position to definitely state the cause and cure of colds."

'Age of Eloquence' Revived By League Court Debate

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Seldom is it given, in these latter days, to either house of Congress, in spite of much speaking, to make an enduring contribution to the literature of eloquence.

Senator Bulow

But the final debate upon the question of whether the United States should enter the League of Nations through the trapdoor of its private court was marked by several outbursts of eloquence that will outlive the Senate's every member.

The shortest and perhaps the most impressive of these offerings came from Senator Bulow of South Dakota, who broke a long silence to address to the Senate his simple, straightforward, and obviously honest confession of high purpose.

IMPRESSIVE OFFERINGS

Upon gaining the recognition of Vice-President Garner, who was presiding, this man of quiet courage and firm resolve said:

"Mr. President, I had not intended to speak on the pending resolution. I have no desire to trespass upon the time of the Senate, but I feel that I should take just a moment or two to explain the vote which I intend to cast.

"Heretofore, I have been in favor of the League of Nations and of the World Court, but the recollections of the last year or two have caused me somewhat to change my mind. I have listened to this debate, heard most of it, and most of that which I have not heard I have read, and I find, so far as I now remember, that every senator here who is in favor of going into the World Court is only in favor of going into it provided certain reservations are made. That leads me to the conclusion that perhaps it is a dangerous thing to go into the court.

FOLLOWED DICTATES

"During the more than 60 years of my life in a humble way, often questions have come to me upon which action had to be taken; and from that experience I have realized that my Creator endowed me with a something which, for the want of a better name, we have seen fit to call a conscience. That conscience has always pointed out the road to me. If there were two roads to take, that conscience has always told me the right and wrong road. I have not always obeyed it, but every time I violated its dictates, apologies and regrets have been necessary. When I have followed its dictates, I do not now remember of a single apology that was necessary.

"I sincerely dislike, and it is with deep regret that I cannot, for my leader upon this side of the floor. To me that leadership is voluntary, and I can do as I please, but my conscience is not voluntary and I must walk with my conscience constantly until the end of my days.

"Under the view I now entertain, much as I regret it, I cannot support the pending resolution of adherence, I thank the Senate for its kindly consideration."

LED THE WAY

These words of statesmanship from William John Bulow of South Dakota, give the lie to those who tell us that eloquence is no more, or that statesmen are to be found only in graves of dead politicians.

One reason is to be found in the definition of eloquence given us by William Hazlitt:

"Humility is one part of eloquence. We persuade others by being in earnest ourselves."

It is because the leaders in the long, long fight from George Washington's day until the present have been earnest and immovable in their firm resolve to keep America American that they have been able to persuade others to follow.

Words of Wise

The worst thing we can say about our neighbor is that he is out of date.—Rev. J. L. Butler.

Every task has its halo, every path its vistas.—Lord Byron.

Lovers are always joyful.—Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.

If anyone asserts as a dogma that human nature never changes, it is fair to reply it is human nature to change itself.—Professor W. E. Hocking.

From your mistakes develop foresight. From your thoughtlessness quicken attention.—Dr. Roy E. Whitney.

Text For Today "Faith Is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Hebrews xi, 1.
